THE GERMAN EMPIRE.

Proclamation of William of Prussia As Emperor in Versailles—The German Princes Present.

VERSAILLES, Jan. 19.—WILLIAM of Prussia was yesterday proclaimed Emperor of Germany in the "Hall of Mirrors," in the presence of all the German Princes and representatives of the regiments of the army.

THE PROCLAMATION.

LONDON, Jan. 18—8½ P. M.—King WILLIAM issued the following proclamation at Versailles on the occasion of his assumption of the imperial crown. He says:

In consequence of the appeal of the German Princes and of the free towns for us to restore the German Empire, after a lapse of sixty years, we announce that we consider it our duty to the Fatherland to accept the imperial dignity. Henceforth we and our successors will bring to the title of Emperor of Germany the hope that God will vouchsafe a blissful future to the Fatherland, and that under our auspices its ancient splendor may be restored. We partake of the dignity, conscious of our duty to preserve with German fidelity the rights of the Empire and of its members, to maintain peace, and to support and strengthen the independence of Germany, in the hope that the German people will reap in lasting peace within our boundaries the fruits of their bloody battles, and be safe against the renewal of French attacks. God grant that we and our successors may protect the Empire, not by war like conquests, but by works of peace, freedom and civilization.

There was a great military pageant at Versailles today in honor of the restoration of the German Empire.

Congratulations of the Prussian Diet—An Address from the Lower House—Alliance with Austria the Realization of the Great German Idea.

BERLIN, Jan. 19.—The President of the Upper House of the Prussian Diet sent a telegraphic dispatch to Versailles congratulating King WILLIAM on assuming the Imperial crown. The Emperor replied by telegraph, returning thanks and predicting a glorious future for Germany.

The Lower House adopted a congratulatory address to the Emperor, the Polish members only dissenting.

MUNICH, Jan. 19.—In the Lower House today Herr von BRAY made a speech, in the course of which he declared that he could not but rejoice over an alliance between Germany and Austria, as it was the sole means of realizing the great German idea.

HAVANA, Jan. 20.—The Bremen steamer Hanover sailed on Wednesday from this port. Finding two French men-of-war in the offing, the Hanover returned. It was reported last night that the Hanover had again sailed, accompanied by the Prussian man-of-war Koln.

GENERAL TELEGRAMS.

THE ALBANY EXPRESS ROBBERY.

Filkins Identified by Halpine as the Person Who Shot Him—The Examination Continued.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 20.—The Chief of Police and several detectives, this morning, took FILKINS into the presence of HALPINE, when the latter unhesitatingly declared, "That is the man who entered my car." The examination in the case was continued today, and the drift of the testimony is strongly against him. The young man who sold the pistol used identifies him as the purchaser. FILKINS maintains a calm and apparently unembarrassed demeanor.

Another Report of the Identification—Filkins Faints Away—Origin of the Suspicions Against Him.

TROY, Jan. 20.—HALPINE identified FILKINS this morning. Eight men of the same general appearance of FILKINS went to HALPINE'S room in company with the prisoner. They approached HALPINE and shook hands with him. He looked clearly at each of them, and when he came to FILKINS, said decidedly and without hesitation, 'That is the man who shot me." FILKINS fainted and fell to the floor. It is now rumored outside that HALPINE has always thought that FILKINS was the guilty person, and that it was from what he said that FILKINS was first suspected and watched. This identification is discouraging to FILKINS' friends, though they still assert his innocence. It is said, on what seems to be unquestionable authority, that there are enough points against FILKINS to have convicted him even without this identification. What they are have not yet been made public, and as the identification is enough to hold him, they will be reserved until his trial.

EXECUTION OF A MURDERER.

Henry Welcome Hanged in the Vermont State Prison—Last Hours of the Criminal.

WINDSOR, Vt., Jan. 20.—HENRY WELCOME, the Hinesburg murderer, was hanged in the State Prison at this place, today. Last evening, during the visit of the chaplain, WELCOME was comparatively composed, and talked freely on religious matters and prayed fervently. He expressed sorrow for his crime, and pleaded for forgiveness in the next world. He did not sleep much last night, and had breakfast early this morning. At 12:40 a procession was formed at the cell door, and marched to the place of execution, where, after the usual religious exercises on the platform, the death warrant was read, and WELCOME then made a short address, attributing the cause of his unfortunate end to rum and disobedience to his parents, and admonished all to avoid those offenses. He then made an affecting prayer, and at 1 o'clock the drop fell. Six minutes afterward WELCOME'S pulse ceased to beat, and in twenty minutes his body was placed in the coffin. The following was his last written address:

MY DEAR YOUNG FRIENDS: With respect, HENRY WELCOME takes this as a last gift from God that I should give you some incidents of my life, hoping they will instruct you. Allow me to thank all for the kindness you have manifested toward me, an unhappy prisoner; and it is out of respect to you that I think it my duty to write this sketch. I have six sisters and four brothers, and I am the only bad sinner among them. I always attended Sabbath-school, and my father and mother are members of a Methodist church at Hinesburg. When I was sixteen years of age I left my happy home and went to visit a sister in Stowe. When I returned I was bound to leave home, but my parents wished me to stay at home and go to school. I would not mind them, but went to Boston. I got a good situation, but fell in with bad company, going to a billiard hall, and learning also the use of liquor, which I used to excess. When in liquor I was persuaded to try my hand at "seven up." At first I refused, but being unchecked by home influences and exposed to all the desires of my corrupt heart, I gambled and plunged into all sorts of wickedness. The story of my transgressions and sins would fill a large volume. Finally, after one of my times, I went to Hinesburg the 1st of October, 1868, but, my friends, if I had listened to my mother's pleading voice, what a happy young man I should have been this day; and oh! my friends, how many heart-rending, earnest prayers has my kind mother offered to the throne of grace and mercy for me! She never upbraided me, but strove to reclaim me by kindness, urging me to abstain from the sins I was committing daily. This was Thursday, my mother gave this advice, and I went from her arms with a kiss on my lips, plunging into all sorts of crime and vice, and on Saturday of the same week I committed the crime, so great that it will leave a stain upon the land forever, and when committed broke the heart of my mother and hung millstones to the hearts of all my friends, and robbed them of all joy and comfort on earth. And only think, I, HENRY WELCOME, at the age of nineteen years, placed in this horrible situation! To-morrow I must suffer the sentence of death. Think, my friends, this is a hard lot for a young man to be sent into the presence of his Maker on the gallows, but I am to give my life for the life I have taken. Pardon me, my friends, for saying so much to you. My heart is full, and my words are for you a warning that you may never come to my sad end. But tears will avail nothing for me now. May the blood of Christ wash away my crime! This is my last and only hope.

HENRY WELCOME.

CANADA.

The Dominion Board of Trade—Action on Free-Trade—The Canadian Pacific Railroad.

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—A meeting of the Dominion Board of Trade, composed of representatives from the Boards of Trade of all the principal cities in the Dominion, is now in session here. The Board are strongly in favor of free-trade. The Board adopted a motion to petition Parliament, at the next session, for the repeal of the duties on flour, grain, coal and coke. Salt had been included, but was stricken out by an amendment. The question of communication with Manitoba was debated for some time, and a resolution was adopted urging the Government to take steps toward the construction of the Canadian Pacific Railroad, and to apply the public lands to the assistance of that enterprise.

Forgery in Elmira, N. Y.—Arrest of the Alleged Criminal.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Jan. 20.—A young man giving his name as LAMAR AYRES was arrested at Harnellsville, Steuben County, last night, and brought to this city today, accused of selling to Mr. COLLINGWOOD, of this city, a draft for $200, drawn by the First National Bank of New-York, and made payable to the order of BAIRD & CUMMINGS, of that city. The indorsement of BAIRD & CUMMINGS is pronounced a forgery. The draft is genuine, and was issued on the 17th. On the 18th it was sold in this city. AYRES was examined before the City Recorder this afternoon, and was held on the charge of forgery, to await the action of the next Grand Jury of this County.

The Weather on Mount Washington.

SUMMIT OF MOUNT WASHINGTON, Jan. 20—7 P. M.—Barometer, 23.70; being a change since our last report of minus .29. Thermometer, 14° above zero. Relative humidity, .63. Wind, west. Velocity of wind, 34 miles per hour. The wind has been very unsteady. Now it come in gusts, against which it is almost impossible to stand, and then for an instant there is almost a perfect calm. This is something uncommon for this altitude. There is comparatively little snow in the mountains. The sides of Adams and Madison are almost as bare and brown as in Summer.

Pardon of Richard Ficken, of Harrisburg—He Pays $20,000 to the Father of a Boy He Had Shot.

HARRISBURG, Penn., Jan. 20.—RICHARD FICKEN, who seriously wounded a boy who rang his door-bell on last All-Hallows Eve, has been pardoned by Gov. GEARY, FICKEN having paid $20,000 to the father of the wounded lad for injuries received. FICKEN gave bail in $12,000 for his appearance to answer, but subsequently fled from justice. This pardon will probably release his bail, though some papers contend that the Governor has no right to pardon when FICKEN has not been convicted of crime.

Fatal Ice-Boat Accident on the Hudson River.

HUDSON, N. Y., Jan. 20.—JACOB BEST, aged about twenty years, was instantly killed, this afternoon, by a collision of ice-boats in front of this city. The two boats were going north at a great speed, under a high wind, when BEST'S boat became unmanageable by running into a crevice, and the collision seems to have been unavoidable.

FIRES.

Burning of a Canadian Hotel—Narrow Escape of the Inmates—Mills Burned—A Barn and Cattle Destroyed at City Point, Va.

OTTAWA, Jan. 20.—The St. James Hotel was burned early yesterday morning, and many of the inmates barely escaped, and in their night-clothing. The fire broke out about 4 o'clock, in the basement, somewhere in the neighborhood of the furnace. It was discovered by the dense volume of smoke in the building, and it was with the greatest difficulty that the boarders and travelers escaped. Not an article of the new and splendid furnishings was saved—the whole of the building being so densely filled with smoke that it would have been madness to have attempted it. At 5 o'clock the fire had become so intense in the wing of the building as to preclude all hope of any part being saved. The alarm was constantly rung out for two hours, but people and engines came slowly on the scene. It was an hour after the alarm before water could be had, and even then only in driblets. At 6 o'clock nothing was left but the bare walls, one of which in falling destroyed the telegraph line for a considerable distance. The building was a large cut-stone one, on the corner of Metcalfe and Queen streets, and has only just been entirely refitted and furnished anew by the proprietor, Mr. EVANS, who had only $3,000 insurance on his furniture in the Imperial. His loss will be fully $10,000.

ST. LOUIS, Jan. 20.—The flouring mill of FINK & NARSE, at Moro, Ills., was burned on Wednesday night. The loss is $20,000; insured for $11,000.

CONCORD, N. H., Jan. 20.—S. M. TUCK & Co.'s steam hoisery mill, at Lake Village, for some time unused, was burned this morning. The loss is $3,500; insured.

RICHMOND, Va., Jan. 20.—The barn of Dr. EPPES, at City Point, was burned last night, together with thirteen animals and 2,000 bushels of grain.

EVANSVILLE, Ind., Jan. 20.—ZAUCK'S brewery and dwelling-house, in this city, was burned to the ground this morning, water being inaccessible. Loss $18,000. Insured for $13,000, as follows: Queen, of London and Liverpool, $4,000; Fulton, of New-York, $2,000; Independence, of Boston, $2,000; Home, of Columbus, Ohio, $2,000; and Germania, of Cincinnati, $3,000.

RAILROAD MATTERS.

Loose Book-keeping on a Western Road—Unprofitable Leased Roads—Interest on Hagerstown Certificates Not to be Paid.

CINCINNATI, Ohio, Jan. 20.—The stockholders of the Cincinnati, Indiana and Lafayette Railroad held an adjourned meeting at Morris, Ind., todsy, with Mr. W. S. GROESBECK in the chair. Over 80,000 shares were represented. The report of the Committee upon the history and management of the road, says the books of the Company had been loosely kept, but the condition for four years is about as follows: Receipts from the main line, from $1,500,000 to $1,600,000 per annum; expenses, $1,000,000; the leased lines cause a loss of $100,000 a year. Total liabilities, $15,200,000. The Committee made a comparison with the condition four years ago, unfavorable to the late management. The leased lines are found to be quite unfortunate ventures, as they require much of the equipment that was required on the main line, and some of them were built on the credit of the company. The Directors recommend canceling of these leases by negotiation or by legal means. The report was ordered to be printed and sent to the stockholders. A resolution was adopted instructing the directors to refuse payment of the interest on the Hagerstown certificates; also, instructing the directors to carry out an arrangement, agreed upon by the creditors, for funding the debt in bonds to be secured by a new mortgage.

The Cincinnati and Southern Railroad—Meeting of the Chattanooga Board of Trade.

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn., Jan. 20.—The Chattanooga Board of Trade, at a special meeting tonight, passed unanimously resolutions declaring the Cincinnati and Southern Railroad an imperative necessity to Tennessee and Kentucky. While recognizing the subject as of national importance, and as fit a subject for Congressional legislation as any road that spans the continent, they prefer that it should spring into life and grow into perfection under the control of the people in their private capacity, whose necessities it serves and whose interests it promotes. They were reflecting the wishes and the spirit of the people of Tennessee and of their Southern neighbors. They earnestly request the people of the State of Kentucky through their Legislature, to grant to the Cincinnati and Southern Railroad such privileges and franchises as will secure its immediate construction, and that in doing so, they do not ask of Kentucky anything which they would not urge to be given in return, and which Tennessee has already given to the people of Kentucky, believing that they only seek that which will be a mutual benefit and a mutual reward. H. N. SNYDER was appointed by the delegates to present the resolutions to the Kentucky Legislature.

Murder and Suicide in Baltimore—A Seaman Kills a Woman who Refused to Marry Him.

BALTIMORE, Md., Jan. 20.—This morning, Mrs. MARY ANN ANDERSON, a widow, aged forty-five years, residing at No. 85 South Caroline-street, was shot and killed by PETER HEBURG, who then shot himself through the head, causing instant death. HEBURG was a seaman, about forty years of age, and boarded with Mrs. ANDERSON, when in the city. He had proposed marriage to her, which she declined, and this is supposed to have been the cause of the tragedy.

Taxation in Tennessee—An Increased Rate.

NASHVILLE, Tenn., Jan. 20.—A bill has been passed, by both branches of the Legislature, increasing the State taxes to sixty cents on the $100. Last year the tax was forty cents on the $100. This increase even falls short of the amount necessary to meet the obligations of the State.

Miscellaneous Telegrams.

WASHINGTON.

The Income Tax Doomed—A Neat Point Against Certain Democratic Leaders—New Government for the District of Columbia—The Army Appropriation Bill—A New Equal Rights Bill—State War Loans—Horrible Treatment of a Balky Horse.

Special Dispatch to the New-York Times.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 20.—The Income tax, despite certain unpromising indications at the outset of the session, seems doomed. The Senate today, to the surprise of everybody, by a vote of 30 to 12, made Senator's SCOTT'S bill for its repeal the special order for Tuesday next.

The following is the letter of Hon. W. M. EVARTS and SPENCER MILLER, Esq., on the constitutionality of the income tax, to which reference was made in these dispatches a few days since:

GENTLEMEN: We have considered with great care the questions which you have submitted to us, and give you the results which we have reached. We are of opinion that a tax on the the gross income of an individual is embraced by the words "capitation, or other direct tax," in the Constitution, and should be assessed and collected on the principle of apportionment and not of uniformity, and that the several sections of the Internal Revenue act imposing such tax are therefore unconstitutional. We are further of opinion that no decision of the Supreme Court of the United States precludes this view or discourages the expectation that it will receive the sanction of the Court. On the contrary, there are dicta and suggestions in the only decisions bearing upon the subject which tend to confirm the opinion we have expressed. But we are further of opinion that even if the tax on gross income, as such, is constitutionally laid by the act in question, it includes, as portions of such income, sums which cannot be taxed at all, as interest on State bonds, or cannot be taxed under such an act, as rents and annual profits of real estate, wages of labor, and, perhaps, other special items of taxation. Whether, if these and other portions of the income of individuals are improperly included in the income tax, and must be excepted, the whole income tax fails, is a question that has been raised, but is not so clear under the decisions as to make us speak with that confidence with which we do on the other points. Yours, respectfully,

(Signed,) E. SPENCER MILLER,
JAN. 14, 1871. WM. M. EVARTS.

UNHAPPY DEMOCRATS.

Much amusement was occasioned in the House today in the debate on the Diplomatic and Consular Appropriation bill, by an incident in which certain Democratic leaders were literally "hoist by their own petard." Messrs. WOOD and ELDRIDGE were engaged in a bitter attack upon the President, and his expenditure of the secret service fund, arguing that this fund ought to be abolished; that it was contrary to the genius of our institutions to permit such a peculiar element of power to remain in the hands of a President, with so many chances of its being corruptly used, when Mr. KELSEY, of New-York, who had charge of the bill, quietly sent for the Globe, and at the conclusion of the gentleman's remarks, he sent some of their old speeches up to the Clerk's desk to be read. These speeches were made in 1868, when they as stoutly defended the fund and the use of it made by President JOHNSON against the criticisms of Republicans at that time. There was a burst of laughter, and ELDRIDGE wiggled out of it by saying he had no doubt he was wrong then, but it ended the debate.

NEW GOVERNMENT IN COLUMBIA.

The form of government now existing in the District of Columbia promises to undergo a speedy change. The House spent most of the day on District business, it being the regularly assigned day for that business, and considered and finally passed the Senate bill, which repeals the charters of Washington and Georgetown and the Levy Court, and places the District under a government territorial in form, with a Governor and Council of eleven, appointed by the President and confirmed by the Senate, and a House of Delegates elected by the people. A Board of Public Works is to be created, which is to have control of the streets, improvements, parks, &c. There is a provision by which the real estate of the Government, exclusive of the public buildings, is to be taxed at the same rate as private property. This is great progress, and will do much toward putting an end to the yearly-recurring controversies about appropriations, for Washington improvements. The Government will pay its taxes like other people, and the money will be used for the improvement of the District. The indications now are that the bill will be concurred in by the Senate, and become a law at this session. It will prove a vast benefit to the District, without doubt.

GEN. WOODFORD IN TOWN AND THE CONSEQUENCE.

Because Gen. WOODFORD is here on purely private business, and demeans himself as a private gentleman should in paying his respects to those to whom his respects are due, the gossips have started the story that he is after the fleshpots of the Custom-house, and that President GRANT is all but ready to put him in. There are those who can never see in the simplest act of courtesy any motive but selfishness or intrigue, and to this class belong many newspaper men, whose eyes are chiefly used for espionage upon the private acts of private gentlemen.

THE ARMY APPROPRIATION BILL.

The Army Appropriation bill was agreed upon today by the Committee on Appropriations, and subsequently reported to the House by Mr. DICKEY. It conforms to the estimates of the Secretary of War, except in the estimate for the Ordnance Bureau, which is reduced from $1,350,000 to $675,000. The total amount appropriated by the bill is a little over $27,000,000.

THE SUCCESSOR OF COMMISSIONER WILSON.

The Committee on Public Lands of the Senate, to whom was referred the nomination of Mr. DRUMMOND to succeed Mr. WILSON, as Commissioner of the Land Office, will report Mr. DRUMMOND'S name all but unanimously at the first opportunity. There is but one member opposed to him.

MR. SUMNER'S EQUAL RIGHTS BILL.

Mr. SUMNER, today, presented a memorial from the recent Labor Convention of the colored men held in this city, asking for the passage of "A bill, supplemental to the Civil Rights act, known as Mr. Sumner's bill," and setting forth the social discriminations made in public conveyances, theatres, and similar places, against colored persons. Mr. SUMNER was proceeding to complain of the Judiciary Committee for allowing the bill to sleep in its rooms, when it was discovered that the Committee had reported the bill adversely, last session, and that it had been indefinitely postponed. This fact created some amusement at Mr. SUMNER'S expense, which he took very good-naturedly. Subsequently he introduced the bill anew, and moved its reference to the same Committee, remarking that he hoped it would have a better fortune than last session.

PUBLIC PARK FOR WASHINGTON.

There has been renewed attention recently called to the desirableness of a public park in this city. Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, today secured the passage of a resolution directing the Committee on Public Buildings and Grounds to inquire, in substance, into the practicability of uniting into a common public park all the grounds extending from the Capitol to the river, including the Agricultural and Smithsonian Grounds, and the grounds west of the Executive Mansion, the cost to be defrayed by the sale of public reservations in other parts of the city which will not be needed for public use.

NEW SENATOR FROM GEORGIA.

Immediately after the reading of the records today in the Senate, Mr. MORTON presented the credentials of FOSTER BLODGETT, elected by the Georgia Legislature to the United States Senate for six years, beginning March 4 next.

STATE WAR LOANS.

The discussion after the morning hour in the Senate was chiefly confined to Mr. MORTON'S bill for refunding to States interest and discount on money borrowed by them for war purposes during the rebellion. There is opposition to the bill from various sides; some objecting to its purpose, and some to the extent to which it goes. No action was taken. It looks now as though the bill would have a hard time to get through the Senate, at least till considerably amended.

COLORADO A STATE.

The Senate Committee on Territories has agreed to report favorable on the bill enabling Colorado to form a State Government.

CRUELTY TO ANIMALS.

The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals, lately organized here, is setting vigorously to work, and easily finds enough inhumanity to engage its attention. It would seem from a case exciting much interest just now, that the next complaint made ought to be against a Magistrate, named WALTER, and in any event that future cases should be brought before some other Justice. An inhuman monster in Georgetown named JACOBS, last Tuesday, in a fit of rage because his horse was balky, seized its tongue and pulled it out by the roots, leaving it on the walk, where it was afterward picked up and preserved. This action had a very stimulating and satisfactory effect, and the poor animal, thus encouraged, with great docility drew the load to this city, distance of two miles. Mr. GATCHELL, the President of the Society, yesterday, had JACOBS arrested, and the facts were proved before Justice WALTER, who let the wretch go with a fine of $5, the lowest penalty allowed by law. The horse was examined today. It was determined that it was rendered worthless, and was killed to relieve it of further suffering. The local papers are very justly indignant, both at the criminal, and the easy way in which he was let off.

Dispatch to the Associated Press.

THE PRESIDENT'S FIRST RECEPTION.

The President's first public reception of the season took place to-night. Thousands of per sons were present, including Cabinet officers, foreign ministers, Senators and Representatives, and many others of public distinction. The President was assisted in receiving visitors by Mrs. GRANT. The Marine band played during the evening.

CONGRESSMAN BUTLER'S TRIAL.

The trial of Hon. R. R. BUTLER for alleged forgery in certain pension cases, has been fixed for Wednesday next.

CONSCIENCE.

A Baltimorean, who professes to have clean hands and a pure heart, has forwarded $30 to be applied to the Conscience Fund of the Treasury.

CONSULAR RECOGNITION.

The President has recognised JUAN DE D. RESTREPO, Consul-General of the United States of Columbia in New-York.

RECEIPTS FROM APPLE BRANDY.

An examination of the receipts from brandy distilled from apples, grapes and peaches for the months of July, August, September, October and November, 1870, shows an increase of $321,653 over the same months in 1869. The receipts for the latter being $387,164 and for the former $608,818. This gain is attributed to the liberal provisions made by the Revenue Bureau last Summer, governing fruit distillation, which largely increased the number of fruit distilleries in the South and West. The later months of this fiscal year will show even larger returns than those indicated above.

INSURANCE POLICY STAMPS.

An erroneous statement has been published that Commissioner PLEASONTON decided that no stamps were required to be affixed on the renewal of insurance policies. Such is not the case. Stamps are required to be affixed when such policies are renewed.

NOMINATIONS.

The following nominations were sent by the President to the Senate today:

H. M. Buckley to be Pension Agent at Louisville, Ky.; Leroy L. Dyer to be Indian Agent at Grande Ronde, Oregon; Joel Palmer to be Indian Agent at the Siletz Agency, Oregon.

NAVAL PROMOTIONS.

Commodore W. R. Taylor, to be Rear-Admiral; Capt. Napoleon Collins, to be Commodore; Commander Thomas H. Phelps, to be Captain; Lieut.-Commander Charles J. McDougal, to be Commander; Ensign E. S. Richards, to be Master.

AMERICAN STEAM-SHIPS.

A New Plan Before the House Committee on Commerce—American Lines to be Subsidized by a Bounty on Immigrants.

From an Occasional Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Jan. 16, 1871.

A novel plan for the establishment and encouragement of American steam lines from our principal Atlantic seaports to Europe, was submitted to the House Committee on Commerce a few days ago. It proposes to subsidize such lines by granting a bounty on immigrants brought into the country by their steam-ships. The number of steamers is limited to eighty, of which at least fifty shall be steamers built in the United States; the remaining thirty may be built or bought abroad. To encourage the building of the steamers at home, and to provide a fair compensation for the extra cost of building first-class iron steam-ships in the United States, it is proposed to pay the American-built ships a bounty of $20 upon every immigrant, and the foreign-built steamers, registered as American, and owned, managed and commanded by American citizens, $10 per immigrant.

It is argued that, under this arrangement, American ship-owners will be able to enter at once into successful competition with the powerful British companies which now monopolize the trade between the United States and Great Britain, and that American lines will be promptly organized, building half their steamers in England to save time, and the other half in the United States, to secure the additional bounty. The plan looks to the protection of both ship-owners and ship-builders, and is proposed as a compromise measure, which, it is thought, will be equitable to both those interests, and end the antagonism which now exists between them, to the serious injury of the navigation interests of the country. It is also intended to supersede the personal and special subsidy bills which are now before Congress, and which seek to build up one or two steam lines at the cost of the Government, and for the exclusive benefit of the few favored individuals who are soliciting the grant.

A strong argument in favor of the proposed system is, that it favors no individual, clique, city or section, but is open to all American citizens who may be prepared to take advantage of its provisions. It will afford the new Philadelphia Company the aid that they must have in some shape to save their enterprise from melancholy failure. Under its influence Boston may start a Liverpool steam line with more than a reasonable prospect of success; and New-York can establish half a dozen profitable lines, provided her ship-owners act promptly and in advance of the ship-owners of other ports.

To the objection that a bounty upon steerage passengers would be a violation of our navigation treaties with England, it is replied that England has set us the example in subsidizing her steam lines, and that in principle there is little difference whether the subsidy is nominally paid for mail service or for the encouragement of immigration, under which last heading it is proposed to grant the bounty.

The steamers it is proposed shall carry the United States mails for the sea postage, shall be at the disposal of the Government in time of war, and shall not be sold out of the country without the consent of the Secretary of the Treasury.

Are the people aware to what extent the steam-ship subsidy business is carried in the present Congress? Here is a table, carefully prepared, showing the amounts asked for by the various subsidy bills pending, and which are to come up for consideration next Friday:

American and Europ. Penn.....	$1,200,000 for 12 years	$14,400,000

LETTERS FROM EUROPE.

ENGLISH AFFAIRS

The Season and the Weather—Political Prospects—England Insulted, Threatened, and Outraged—Germany's Future Influence in Europe—The Germans Dreaming of an Invasion of England—Index of English Feeling.

From Our Own Correspondent.

LONDON, Thursday, Jan. 5, 1871.

The cold has now continued for two weeks with great intensity—not what you people of Wenham Lake ice would call cold, but a very unusual degree for these islands. The ice is five to six inches thick in the London parks; no more duckings, but abundant broken heads. On Sunday there were in St. James' Park, the smallest in London, no less than 130,000 people, most of whom were show-balled by the roughs, and many robbed. The water-pipes, laid for a mild climate, are frozen in four houses out of five, and people are forced to go to the hydrants in the streets for water.

POLITICAL PROSPECTS.

The political sky is stormy. The changes in the Cabinet have not strengthened it. Leading Liberal organs cry "breakers ahead." The vote of want of confidence, the Spectator says, has been already passed by the people, and, unless something be done, this vote will be registered by Parliament. England sees herself insulted, threatened, outraged, and that she has no power to defend herself. A correspondent of the Times with the Germans on the Loire, tells us that the invasion of England is a favorite subject of conversation and calculation among the German officers. The Times meekly argues that the seizure of eight English vessels, and sinking them in the Seine, is nothing to complain of. A belligerent has the right to take any neutral ship he can lay his hands on. If BISMARCK could take the Channel fleet to use in bombarding the French seaports, it would be all right. But Englishmen generally do not look upon the matter so philosophically. And how, I wonder, would Americans fancy the seizure of ships, trampling on their flag, and the robbery of their sailors? A heavy bombardment is kept up by the partisan Press upon the Gladstone Cabinet. Today's Standard says:

"The incapacity of the present Ministry to manage the foreign affairs of this country has been signally demonstrated by the condition of isolation in which England now finds herself. Threatened and insulted on all sides—defied by Russia, outraged by Prussia, bullied by America, mocked at and set at naught even by the miserable Kingdom of Greece—there is not a single friend on whom we can rely, or a single ally on whose good offices we can pretend to reckon. Mr. GLADSTONE has allowed the great Western alliance, which was so long the guarantee of peace in Europe, to be demolished. He has permitted the formation of what appears to be a league of the Eastern Powers with America, the completion of which would threaten England with a more formidable danger than any which she has ever had to meet."

But there are great numbers of English who are for peace at any price. That is, they are ready to withdraw from all concern with the affairs of Europe; to withdraw from all treaties; to let Denmark, Luxembourg, Belgium or Turkey be swallowed up; to allow annexation or independence to English colonies, if England can be left at peace. "But," I ask them, "what of India? You must have fleets and armies to maintain your government over two hundred millions of people on the other side of the world." This is a difficulty. To keep Ireland and India, England must be a great military and naval Power. And if this, why not use her power in the cause of justice and national rights in Europe and over the world? Thus a contest is going on everywhere—the feeling for peace, the horror of war, the dread of increased expenditure and debt, on the one hand, and on the other the pride of prestige and power. How can the haughty Englishman travel over the Continent as a meek and peaceful Quaker, powerless to repel insults, or prevent, not to say avenge, injuries? But things cannot rest as they are. England must take one rôle or the other. She must be a Power among the nations, or sink into utter insignificance, and find her trade, her possessions, herself, at the mercy of the first unscrupulous invader. From now to the meeting of Parliament this subject will occupy the public and the Press, and the Government cannot meet Parliament without a well-defined policy, and will be turned out without mercy if it fails to satisfy the nation. An early session is much desired, but the Government will prefer to wait as long as possible.

SENTIMENT TOWARD ENGLISH CHARITY.

English charity to the conquerors—England bearing the burdens that ought to fall upon Germany, in the care of their wounded, sick and prisoners—is not so popular as it has been. England has given £300,000 to one of these war funds, and saved the Germans at least a million of dollars in money. A writer in the Standard takes a strong but not peculiar view of the case when he says this vast amount is taken from the suffering and at times starving poor of England:

"For the comforting of the very instruments of all this havoc (many of them the fire-raisers, burglars, foot-pads, assassins, hangmen, who have burned the towns and villages, sacked the private houses, requisitioned the private money, shot the peasants and municipal authorities—the harmless non-combatants in this bloody fray)—to heal the sick and wounded, who, being cured, will return to renew the work of homicide and devastation. In its first aspect, this grand spontaneous impulse of Christian charity seems but the noble instinct of magnanimous civilized intelligence. But, in truth, it is the illogical conclusion of a false morality—a compromise of justice—a compounding of rapine—a holding of the candle to the devil—the very hypocricy of benevolence—the cant of Christian kindness. If we see even dogs worrying in the street we do not wait till the one has throttled the other, and then send for the veterinary surgeon to the victor. If we find human beings fiving at each other's throats, do we calmly look on till one has knocked the other's brains out, and then, in tears, carry the survivor to the hospital and the doctor?"

And what weighs quite as much with many is the evident fact that England gets no gratitude on one side at least, for all she is doing—only contempt and outrage.

FUTURE INFUENCE OF GERMANY.

M. MICHAEL CHEVALIER, a French writer who has been popular in England, has been writing upon the effects which the triumph of BISMARCK may have on this country. If France be blotted out from the list of Great Power, Germany can command the Western sea-board, from Norway to Gibraltar. She will have navies and sailors; and, in the case of a war with America, he asks, "Would the situation of England be an enviable one? Would she have reason to congratulate herself on having held herself aloof from Continental affairs in 1870? Would she not bitterly regret having coldly allowed her faithful ally to be thus mercilessly crushed?" "An invasion of England," he says, "would be popular in Germany." English travelers and correspondents tell us that the idea of one is so already. "The Germans are not mere dreamers; when they make war, they make it pay:"

"They act as utilitarians with a vengeance. Booty has great attractions for them; they have a weakness for 'loot.' Independently of requisitions and war contributions they find a charm in individual plunder. Werther ever thinks of Lotte and her children, and is mindful of the pleasant home on the banks of the Elbe and the Oder, which can be embellished by knick-nacks and articles of vertu. Their pockets, their knapsacks, and the wagons they can lay their hands on, are filled with these souvenirs intended for home. Now, what a place England would be to plunder; how many touching, rich, valuable mementoes of his visit the landwehrman—good husband and tender father that he is—would he not find in the ancestral seats of the peerage and the comfortable houses of the English middle class? What a mine of wealth would he not find in London, the rendezvous of the capitalized wealth of the whole world. Supposing England invaded, she would then experience—what she pretends to ignore—the manner in which Prussians carry on the war, and the respect which they show for the rights of humanity. She would learn the bitter lesson taught by showers of bombs rained down upon open and defenseless towns; villages burned with petroleum as a punishment for harboring a few volunteers or militiamen, whom the Prussians might not choose to acknowledge as belligerents; she would have her experience widened by the outrages on her wives and daughters, (as at Bazeilles;) by having her Mayors flogged and dragged at horses' tails; by her Judges and most eminent citizens made to ride on the engines drawing trains laden with Prussian troops or ammunition; in short, by all that France has witnessed, suffered and experienced for the last four months."

M. MICHEL CHEVALIER'S conclusion is that by helping France to resist, and check the overgrowth of Prussia, England would act in her own interest; and he puts the matter practically enough when he says that, once France is crushed, the English home army must be raised to 850,000 men. In conclusion, M. MICHEL CHEVALIER asks how is it that "the bright intellects" that rule England do not understand that her interests are bound up with those of France? An English journal says: "He will find the answer to his question in the apathy with which the country seems to view our seven vessels lying at the bottom of the Seine."

A writer in the Contemporary Review takes an equally gloomy view of the prospects of England as a great Power. He says:

"At this moment we are drifting to the disintegration of our Empire. Few believe it. Few have seen the great currents sweeping away off beyond the horizon, commencing their vast circuits even at the antipodes, but ere long the cyclone will burst upon us, and every one, especially the chief officers, will acknowledge a divine wind, and calmly resign themselves to see the vessel rocked and blown to pieces, saving themselves, no doubt, 'some on boards, and some on broken pieces of the ship.'"

But I believe that all this will not come without a tremendous struggle. There will be a great flurry before this whale rolls over and is stripped of her blubber. She will spout blood first, and a great deal of it.

INDEX OF ENGLISH SENTIMENT.

I lighted, the other day, on an index of English feeling—a sixpenny pamphlet on the war, entitled "The Fight at Dame Europa's School: Showing How the German Boy Thrashed the French Boy, and How the English Boy Looked On." My copy is of the tenth thousand. It begins:

"Mrs. Europa kept a dame's school, where boys were well instructed in modern languages, fortification, and the use of the globes. Her connection and credit were good, for there was no other school where so sound and liberal an education could be obtained. Many of her old pupils held masterships in other important establishments, two of which may be mentioned as containing each of dark, swarthy youths, decidedly stupid and backward for their years; while a third was a large modern academy, full of rather cocky fellows, who talked big about the institutions of their school, and talked for the most part through their noses."

The whole case is argued out very cleverly, and the result is the same as that arrived at by M. CHEVALIER.

MONADNOCK.

INSIDE PARIS.

Trochu's Latest Movement—Vinoy's Success—The French Army's Condition—Tiring of Trochu—Prospects for Paris.

From An Occasional Correspondent.

PARIS, Monday, Dec. 26, 1870.

Last week M. TROCHU commanded for the first time in person a grand military movement, and the results were more negative than those he had previously confided to his two principal Generals, DUCROT and VINOY. He moved two hundred thousand men on the enemy's works, half of them for feints and the other half for the principal attack on the fortified villages of Bourget, Blanc-Mesnil, Pont Iblon and Aulny. He took M. DUCROT with him, but the tactics were his own. M. VINOY was charged with the principal feint, and the result of the day was that the feint became a real attack and succeeded, while the Governor's operations totally failed! VINOY carried the villages of Neuilly-sur-Marne, Villa Gorard and the Maison Blanche, and holds them, and thus fixes the French flag at a distance of six miles from the fortifications, which is the furthest point at which it now floats. Before, we were in the habit of talking of the "Department of St. Denis;" we now talk also of the "Department of the Marne." Our horizon grows by inches, but it grows.

THE FRENCH ARMY'S CONDITION.

In these operations the French Army was the best equipped army that ever went to the field, for it is the first time that any artillery force was composed entirely of breech-loading cannons and mitrailleuses. Their number also was formidable, and they appeared to be well handled, for they were carried close to the Prussian works and served with great regularity and apparent coolness. The firing was not so wild as at Champigny, and the young French army is improving so fast that if the weather will only permit, the Prussians will soon be able to learn from their enemy a lesson in the use of artillery. It is not for a civilian to judge of the movements on the field, but after many of the Prussian guns were silenced in the village of Bourget it was a source of astonishment to all of us lookers-on, as well as to the soldiers themselves, that M. TROCHU did not launch a brigade or division of infantry into the place. The disposition of the army, without being enthusiastic, was yet good. The soldiers made no complaint, and went willingly wherever ordered. With such men and such a formidable artillery the Prussians ought to be driven away in a week's time.

TIRING OF TROCHU.

So well are the citizens of Paris convinced of this that a movement is on foot to displace TROCHU as Governor and Commander-in-Chief and replace him by either DUCROT or VINOY. The people are tired of a man who joins to a maximum of words a minimum of acts, and who appears to be willing to allow his reputation as a great commander to rest upon the length of time he can starve without dying. The resources of Paris in food and in material of war is a source of astonishment to ourselves, which grows greater as each day passes over our heads; but these resources are due to the remarkable men of science who inhabit Paris, and not to its Governor. The movement against the Governor was started in the clubs of Paris by the wealthy men of the city; but the poor, and the army itself, are said to be willing to join in signing petitions for his removal. All that is desired now is a new Commander-in-Chief and fair weather, and then you may expect to see an army of two hundred thousand men pass the enemy's lines, with the Government in charge, and hurry away to join the other armies of the Republic.

PROSPECTS FOR PARIS.

We will then, at Paris, be reduced to the dimensions of a municipality, and the war will be carried on on a more colossal scale than ever in the provinces. If we are not then succored in an effective way in a very short time, we will be obliged to capitulate—you cannot imagine how ugly that word sounds to us here in the inside—and Paris may have her prosperity and progress paralyzed a long time yet by the presence within her walls of a Prussian Governor and a Prussian army.

MALAKOFF.

Safety of Americans in Paris.

A circular from Messrs. BOWLES BROTHERS, dated from London, Jan. 4, contains the information following: "We have very full advices from Paris, of date 26th December," it says "by which it would appear certain that whatever suffering may exist among the lower classes there the American community has not, up to this time, felt any serious privations. Christmas Eve was celebrated by a dinner at our own bank apartments, as usual, attended by Minister WASHBURNE, Consul-Gen. READ, and many other friends. We trust that through the medium of the Press, these reassuring and entirely reliable advices may tend to tranquilize the anxieties of those who have friends locked up in Paris."

PERSONAL, POLITICAL, AND GENERAL.

The Governor of Tennessee has given THOMAS H. REEVES a commission as Congressman-at-large from that State.

The inaugural address of Gov. BRADLEY, of Nevada, was very short. It would make about one-fourth of a column in the TIMES.

Philadelphia's new park in the north-eastern section of the city is to comprise about 600 acres, and is to be called Wingohocking Park, when it has an existence.

Hon. H. M. BRACKENRIDGE, of Pittsburg, Penn., formerly an active and prominent politician, member of Congress, &c., died on Wednesday, aged eighty-four years.

Kentucky papers are complaining loudly of the wanton destruction of live stock in that State, and call for prompt measures to detect and punish the guilty persons.

A correspondent of a Richmond paper reports that a man who attempted to cross a creek, on the ice, broke through, and has not since been seen.

Hon. ELLIOTT BEARDSLEY, once a prominent politician and large manufacturer in Connecticut, died in Winsted on Thursday, aged sixty-nine years.

The Kentucky Democratic State Central Committee has refused to change the time for the State Nominating Convention, from May 3 to Feb. 22, as the Democratic legislative caucus requested.

A Canadian paper asserts that the toll on the bridge at Niagara Falls to Goat Island was so high before it was doubled that no one but wedding parties and other simpletons ever crossed it.

Gov. ALCORN, some days since, sent his message to the Mississippi Legislature, but it is so fearfully long that thus far not a single newspaper in the State, so far as we have seen, has dared to attempt to publish it in full.

Three hundred and thirteen applications for divorce were brought before the New-Hampshire Supreme Court last year. Two hundred and twenty-two were decided, a divorce being granted in 167 cases.

The New-Hampshire Republican State Committee has unanimously refused to accept the resignation of Hon. E. H. ROLLINS as its Chairman, and the Committee has done wisely and well.

That colored member of the Virginia Senate, whose remark we quoted yesterday, made a personal explanation on Wednesday, in which he said that if he did not express himself grammatically it was the fault of those who kept him in slavery.

The Class of '74 at Yale College, containing forty-six members, managed to cast sixty-four votes at one ballot at the recent election of the Church Committee. One of the New-Haven papers fear some of them have been paying too close attention to the teachings of Tammany.

The colored clergymen of Maryland have been holding a convention in Baltimore this week, and have voted unanimously that they want more schools for colored children in the several counties, and the restrictions upon colored passengers in street-cars abolished.

There has been a vast improvement in the public schools of Maryland since the war. Six years ago only the very poor sent their children to these schools, which in their way were very poor, too; but now, as the Baltimore American notes with evident pleasure, private schools and governesses are things of the past, and the entire dependence of the people for the education of the young is on the free public schools.

Hon. ELI SAULSBURY, Delaware's new Senator, was serenaded, on Wednesday evening, and invited company to an entertainment, which was conducted on strict temperance principles, the Wilmington Commercial says, and was, consequently, not especially gratifying to some. There apparently has been some improvement in Delaware after all.

SAMUEL N. BELL, the Democratic candidate for Congress in the Second District of New-Hampshire, is a man of high reputation, ample means and much public spirit. He is a son of the late Chief-Justice SAMUEL D. BELL, is a graduate of Dartmouth College, about forty years old, and one of the ablest lawyers in the State.

The widow of Hon. THOMAS D'ARCY MCGEE died suddenly in Montreal on Tuesday night. One of her two daughters returned from a party at a late hour, and entering her room found her on her knees quite dead, with a prayer-book in her hand—she evidently having expired while engaged in her devotions. She was forty-six years of age.

A ship-master at Honolulu reports that, during a recent visit of his vessel at Jarvis Island, a "leopard shark" (so called because its skin is covered with dark spots) was washed ashore, which measured twenty-six feet in length. The distance between the eyes of this monster, he asserts, was four feet, and the width of the jaws nearly three feet. Further particulars may be expected by the next steamer.

President ELIOT, of Harvard College, has written a note to the Mayor of Cambridge, Mass., expressing regret that any of the citizens have had cause to complain of the stench caused by a fertilizer placed in the college grounds, but saying that he thinks the late rains have removed the alleged nuisance, and that, at any rate, the college officers and students who live upon the college grounds have had the worst of the annoyance.

The will of a San Francisco physician, recently deceased, contained the following clause: "After death I wish my body to be dissected by my medical friends, the soft parts burned and the ashes preserved in an urn, the skeleton wired well together, and both kept in some medical college or university in San Francisco. But in case my wife should wish for them, it is my will that they be delivered to her, in case she shall be willing to pay the expense of their preparation."

LINTON STEPHENS had written a long letter in reply to Gov. BULLOCK, in which he contends that the election of Congressman in the Fifth District of Georgia was entirely fair, and says that there, at least, true men, under the inspiring influence of success, will become as bold as they are true, and will carry forward still further the Democratic banner, which they hailed at the beginning of the last campaign with enthusiasm, because it denounce the whole reconstruction scheme of Congress as revolutionary, unconstitutional, null and void.

FORTY-FIRST CONGRESS.

THIRD SESSION.

SENATE....WASHINGTON, Friday, Jan. 20.

The Vice-President laid before the Senate unanimous resolutions of the Indiana Legislature in favor of the House bill granting pensions to the surviving soldiers of the war of 1812.

ANOTHER GEORGIA SENATOR ELECT.

Mr. MORTON presented the certificate of election of FOSTER BLADGETT as a United States Senator from the State of Georgia, for six years from the 4th of March next, which, at Mr. MORTON'S request, was read and laid on the table.

CIVIL RIGHTS.

Mr. SUMNER presented a communication from the National Labor Union Convention, (colored,) lately in session in Washington.

It asks the passage of what is known as Senator SUMNER'S bill, (supplementary to the Civil Rights act now pending before the Judiciary Committee,) the object of which is to apply a remedy for alleged indignities and proscription to which colored people are subjected in railroad cars.

Mr. SUMNER, expressing his hearty sympathy with the prayer of the petition, said the indignities complained of were terrible outrages, to which Congress was bound to apply a remedy before adjourning. Referring to a description by the Lieutenant-Governor of Louisiana (colored) of the annoyances to which he was exposed in traveling from New-Orleans to Washington, he asserted that there must be equal rights in railroad cars, hotels, schools, and in every institution which had the sanction of existing laws, and appealed to Mr. TRUMBULL, as the Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, not longer to delay the remedial legislation.

An explanation by Mr. TRUMBULL developed that the bill referred to by Mr. SUMNER had been reported from the Judiciary Committee on July 7 of last year, and then indefinitely postponed.

Mr. SUMNER asked leave to enter a motion to reconsider the postponement, but

Mr. HAMILTON, of Maryland, objected.

Mr. SUMNER subsequently introduced a bill supplementary to the Civil Rights acts, substantially similar to his bill of last session. Referred to the Committee on the Judiciary.

A NEW-YORK PORT TUNNEL COMPANY.

Mr. CONKLING introduced a bill to provide additional commercial and postal facilities with the Port of New-York.

It incorporates MARSHALL O. ROBERTS, JOHN A. LIVINGSTON, DAVID DUDLEY FIELD and others as the New-York Port Tunnel Company, with authority to construct a tunnel, tube or covered way in or beneath and across the beds of the Bay of New-York or Hudson River, from some point in New-York City to some in New-Jersey opposite, and a similar tunnel from New-York to Brooklyn. The Company is also to be empowered to operate railways in said tunnels, and to construct and use necessary approaches thereto, limited to the grade of forty feet per mile. Damages to and compensation for property to be taken are to be determined by three commissioners to be appointed by the United States District Court.

Referred to the Committee on Commerce.

GOVERNMENT OF THE INDIAN TERRITORY.

Mr. HARLAN introduced a bill to ratify and carry into effect the Constitution and form of government for the Indian Territory, adopted Dec. 20, 1870, at Okmulgee, by a general council of the said Territory, held by authority of the Government of the United States. Referred to the Committee on Indian Affairs.

THE ALABAMA CLAIMS.

Mr. CONKLING presented a memorial from the citizens of New-York approving the recommendation of the President's Message touching the Alabama claims, and asking legislation to carry it into effect. Referred to the Committee on Foreign Relations.

SOUTHERN OUTRAGES.

Mr. MORTON moved the reference of certain papers to the Special Committee on Investigation of Alleged Southern Outrages, and stated that physical indisposition would preclude his accepting the chairmanship of that Committee.

The Vice-President subsequently announced as the Committee referred to Messrs. Scott, Wilson, Pool, Chandler and Davis. The latter named (Mr. DAVIS) declined on account of indisposition.

FAVORABLE REPORTS.

Mr. POMEROY, from the Committee on Public Lands, made a written report upon the amendments to the bill to incorporate the Salt Lake and Colorado River Railroad Company. He also reported from the same Committee a joint resolution for the relief of settlers on the public lands, extending for one year longer the time for making their payments. Passed.

ADVERSE REPORTS.

Mr. CHANDLER, from the Committee on Commerce, reported the following bills adversely:

The bill to constitute Leavenworth, Kansas, a port of delivery, and that to constitute Shreveport, La., a port of delivery; also, the joint resolution accepting the proposals of the International Steam-ship Company for placing iron steam-ships in the Trans-Atlantic service, and were indefinitely postponed.

MAILS FROM NEW-YORK TO BREMEN.

Mr. FENTON introduced, by request, a bill directing the Postmaster-General to contract with the North American Steam-ship Company of New-York for the transportation of the mails weekly, between New-York and Antwerp, or Bremen, touching at Plymouth, and Cherbourg, for a term of fifteen years, at the rate of $15,000 per trip. Referred to the Committee on Commerce.

OBSTRUCTING THE OHIO.

Mr. CHANDLER introduced a joint resolution to prevent obstructions to the navigation of the Ohio River.

It provides that it shall be unlawful for the Newports and Cincinnati Bridge Company, or any other company or person, to proceed in the erection of the bridge now being constructed between Cincinnati and Newport, unless the bridge be so constructed that the channel span shall have a clear headway at low water of 100 feet below the floor-beams suspended from the bottom of posts.

Referred to the Committee on Commerce.

SOLDIERS OF 1812.

On motion of Mr. PRATT, the House bill granting pensions to soldiers of 1812 was made the special order for Wednesday next.

THE SUTRO TUNNEL.

Mr. NYE, in accordance with the previous notice, addressed the Senate on the bill to create a fund to be known as the mineral-land fund, and for other purposes.

The bill provides for paying over to the Sutro Tunnel Company the proceeds of the money received by the United States from the sale of mineral lands, $50,000 to be paid upon the completion of 500 feet, and the tunnel to be completed within ten years.

Mr. NYE, to demonstrate the magnitude of the interests involved in the construction of the Sutro Tunnel, stated that the Comstock lode, to which the tunnel was to be constructed, had yielded, since its discovery ten years ago, $150,000,000, almost equaling the total yield in silver of the whole Republic of Mexico. The mines on that lode have now reached a perpendicular of 1,200 feet, and the obstacles encountered in mining foreshow an early abandonment of it. The difficulties in mining are principally the enormous expense of pumping the water and hoisting the ore, for which fifty-three steam-engines are employed and kept in motion with fire-wood at $12 per cord, and at an expense of $7,000,000 per annum. The great obstacle in mining was the great increase of heat below the surface, the thermometer at 1,200 feet below standing at 110°, making it almost impossible for the men to work, and impairing their health. The Sutro Tunnel would remedy all these evils; it would have a length of seven miles, and would reach under the mines at a depth of 2,000 feet, drawing off the water by its natural flow, thus abolishing the expensive steam machinery. The shafts, connected with the tunnel, will act as chimneys, 2,000 feet in height, through which an air current will enter by the tunnel, cooling the atmosphere and removing the noxious gases. The ore, instead of being hoisted, may be dropped to the tunnel level, and on a railroad be carried to the mouth, or one hundredth of the expense heretofore. Mr. NYE went on to show that mineral lodes of true fissure veins reach down indefinitely, and that this tunnel would be the greatest work of exploration ever carried out. Its scientific value as a geological examination would be incalculable, and an actual demonstration of the continuance of mineral lodes to a greater depth than has ever been reached in the world would give positive evidence of the thousands of millions, buried in the earth, would give a great value to all our mineral lands; and, by making capital flow in that direction, would populate and open up the mineral wealth of the vast country beyond the Missouri River. As a great geological survey in the bowels of the earth this would prove to be of more value than all the superficial geological surveys carried out by the Government heretofore, at an expense of millions of dollars. The bill looks to extending certain aid toward the construction of this tunnel from the sale of mineral lands, not to exceed $3,000,000, while the Government is secured a first mortgage on all the property, and fifty per cent. of the yield to be repaid to Government. The whole work to be under the supervision of Government officers, and no money to be paid until each section is reported completed.

Mr. SHERMAN, of Ohio, remarked that the bill advocated by Mr. NYE had come before the Senate for the special purpose of allowing that Senator to be heard, and he expected it would now be laid aside informally. For one he (SHERMAN) was favorable to encouraging in any proper way the great enterprise of the Sutro Tunnel, but to grant Government aid in such a direction was a novel proposition.

Mr. COLE, of California, spoke of the commendable propriety of the bill in the proposed use of the proceeds from mineral land sales.

The bill was laid aside, Mr. NYE giving notice that he would call it up at an early day.

TELEGRAPH LEGISLATION.

Mr. WILLIAMS, of Oregon, submitted a resolution to be acted upon on Monday next for a select Senate Committee on telegraph legislation.

THE OUTRAGES IN THE SOUTH.

Mr. POOL, of North Carolina, asked to be excused from serving on the Special Committee to investigate alleged outrages in the South, which was this day appointed. Leave was granted. Messrs. RICE and BAYARD were substituted by the chair as members of the Committee, vice POOL and DAVIS resigned.

A PUBLIC PARK.

On the motion of Mr. MORRILL, of Vermont, the Committee on Public Buildings was instructed to inquire and report concerning the purchase and improvement, as a public park, of the two squares east and adjacent to the Capitol grounds, in connection with the lands of the Botanic Garden, the Smithsonian Institute, the Agricultural Department, and the grounds south of the President's Mansion, that are proposed to be reserved in the isale of unimproved lots in the city not required for public use, and remote corners.

STATE WAR LOANS.

The bill to refund to the States the interest and discount on money borrowed to equip, pay, supply and transport troops for the service of the United States in the recent war, was debated during the remainder of the session. The question was stated to be upon Mr. RAMSEY'S amendment to make good to the States the depreciation on the scrip issued to borrow the money advanced to the Government, the effect being confined to a few States in the extreme West. In opposition to the bill it was argued that in drawing a line at ten per cent. as the specific rate of discount, States which had sold their bonds at a larger discount would not be reimbursed for the difference. The principal objection to the bill was to its alleged inequality in practical operation by compelling the States which had taxed themselves to maintain their credit at par to contribute to pay the discount suffered by neighboring States more laggard in raising taxes.

Mr. SHERMAN, while opposed to the incorrect rule imposed by the bill, favored special legislation to reimburse Indiana for the interest and discount on expenditures made by her Governor, now a Senator, (MORTON,) under the most extraordinary circumstances. The Legislature, being politically hostile to the Governor, the latter deemed it imprudent to call that body together, and was therefore compelled to go into the market on his own account, and borrow the money. The amounts expended by the States generally was immense—so great that it would be impossible for accounting officers of the Government to settle the accounts without taking voluminous testimony. He was opposed to including the discount, the bonds of the States having been sold like United States bonds, at varying prices. He moved that the bill be referred to the Committee on Finance.

Mr. BUCKINGHAM, of Connecticut, opposed the bill because of its unequal operation upon the States, and argued to show the difficulty of framing a measure which would secure an equitable settlement.

Mr. MORTON, of Indiana, opposed the reference, and replied at length to Mr. SHERMAN.

Mr. CONKLING, of New-York, argued among other things that in making this money the States only performed their duty, as they were equally interested in preserving the Union, and that self-preservation and not generosity dictated their action. The proposed policy would be unjust to the older States, as the bearers of whatever additional taxation would be required to carry it out, while those already bore a preponderance of taxes.

Mr. A. G. THURMAN, of Ohio, advocated the reference, and Mr. HOWE, of Michigan, opposed it.

INCOME TAX REPEAL.

Mr. SCOTT, of Kansas, asked unanimous consent to make the income tax repeal the special order of business for Tuesday next.

Mr. HOWE objected.

The pending bill being laid aside temporarily, Mr. SCOTT said he desired to test the sense of the Senate on the question, and moved to make the income tax repeal the special order for Tuesday. The motion prevailed by a two-thirds vote, thirty-two Senators rising in its favor to twelve in the negative. At 4½ P. M., after an Executive session, the Senate adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES.

Mr. WOOD, of New-York, presented a petition of the merchants of New-York in favor of the appointment of commissioners to audit and pay the Alabama claims.

PASSED.

Mr. STARKWEATHER, of Connecticut, from the Committee on Commerce, reported a bill to authorize the removal of the Custom-house from St. Mark's to Cedar Key, Fla. Passed.

KNOXVILLE.

Mr. MAYNARD, of Tennessee, asked leave to report from the Committee of Ways and Means a bill to re-establish Knoxville, Tenn., as a port of delivery. Mr. BECK, of Kentucky, objected.

AN EXPLANATION.

Mr. SARGENT, of California, rising to a personal explanation, sent to the Clerk's desk to be read a paragraph from the Washington Republican, of this day, stating that Gen. BLUNT, in his testimony before the Committee of Investigation on Indian Affairs, had stated that one of the great troubles in obtaining appropriations for the Indians was that nearly every member of Congress who voted for appropriations expected and demanded liberal compensation, which was usually paid, and that in order to accomplish that, some sharp practice had to be resorted to. Mr. SARGENT stated that it was only necessary for him to say in reply to that infamous paragraph that Gen. BLUNT had not testified before the Committee up to this time. The Committee had not been able to discover his whereabouts so as to serve a subpœna upon him. The Committee had made efforts continuously, by telegraph and otherwise, and would thank newspaper editors and reporters to publish the fact, that the Committee desired the presence of Gen. BLUNT. There was no testimony from any person of the character stated in that paragraph. It was an aspersion on a body of gentlemen who had nothing in their associations or character to justify it in any degree. It was merely a reckless libel on the House of Representatives.

PRIVATE BILLS.

The House then proceeded to the consideration of private bills, and passed the following:

Of Lieut.-Col. JOHN HOLT, of the Missouri Infantry; of Ruben H. Bishop, of Charleston, Ohio; of Wm. Buck, late Surgeon of the Sixth Maine Infantry; of James J. Hills, of the Third Missouri Cavalry; of John Campbell, of Kentucky; of Robert Bird, late Colonel of the First Tennessee Volunteers; of Walter Lee, Second Lieutenant Twenty-eighth Michigan Infantry; of Jas. Murphy, of Maine; of Henry Anderson and W. B. Critchfield, of the Thirteenth Iowa Infantry; and Samuel Hitchcock, late Second Lieutenant of the Thirty-sixth Illinois Volunteers. Also, for the sale of a place of land in the village of Sag Harbor, in Suffolk County, N. Y.; granting condemned cannon for soldiers' cemeteries; for the relief of the former occupants of the military reservation at Point San Jose, San Francisco.

DIPLOMATIC APPROPRIATIONS.

The House, at 1:40 o'clock P. M., went into Committee of the Whole, Mr. ARNISON in the chair, and resumed the consideration of the Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill.

THE SECRET SERVICE FUND.

The question was on Mr. WOOD'S motion to limit the expenditures of the secret service fund of the State Department, so that none of it shall be used in connection with the annexation of San Domingo.

Mr. BUTLER, of Massachusetts, opposed the amendment, and referred to the fact that the publications of the mode in which Gen. SCOTT disbursed a secret service fund in Mexico, showing an item of $10,000 paid to high Mexican officials, caused a revolution or at least a pronunciamiento in that Republic. It would be seen, therefore, that an attempt to govern the secret service fund would not only lead to complications among officials of the United States, but would take from the President any power to deal with foreign officials. He had no difficulty at all about San Domingo, but he utterly declined to argue that question now. All charges about it would be met and answered at the proper time. But he wanted the gentlemen to consider when they assailed the President where he had no opportunity to answer, and that too without the highest and best cause, and the most thorough evidence, they did wrong not only to the President, but to the country in attempting to belittle the Chief Magistrate.

Mr. ELDRIDGE, of Wisconsin, said that the discussion had satisfied him that the secret service fund ought to be abolished as contrary to the genius and spirit of our institutions. The instance cited by the gentleman from Massachusetts ought to satisfy every one of the impropriety of placing large sums of money in the hands of officials, to be disposed of in their discretion, without rendering an account to the people.

Mr. COX, of New-York, also argued against the continuance of the secret service fund, declaring himself opposed to all "ways that are dark and all tricks that are vain."

Mr. KELSEY, of New-York, expressed his amazement at the position taken by the gentleman on the other side, against the continuance of the secret service fund, and he sent to the Clerk's desk and had read extracts from speeches made last session by Messrs. WOOD and ELDRIDGE, in opposition to an amendment offered by himself (KELSEY) requiring vouchers to be filled, showing the distribution of that fund. The reading of these extracts provoked laughter at the expense of the two members.

Mr. WOOD protested that there was nothing in his speech of last session on this subject which he did not now indorse. He did not take back any of it.

THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA.

The amendment offered by Mr. WOOD was rejected, and, without completing the bill, the House proceeded, at 2 o'clock, to the consideration of the business of the District of Columbia, in compliance with a standing order assigning the third Friday in each month, after 2 o'clock, to that business. The Senate bill to provide for a Government for the District of Columbia was taken up and read.

It proposes a sort of Territorial Government in the District, with a Governor to be appointed by the President, with the advice and consent of the Senate, and who shall hold his office for four years; with a Council of eleven members, and a House of Representatives of twenty-two members; with a Secretary to be appointed by the President for four years, and with a Delegate in Congress. The laws of the Legislative Assembly are to be subject to repeal or modification by Congress. There is to be a Board of Public Works, to consist of the Governor and two persons to be appointed by the President. The members of the Council are also to be appointed by the President.

The bill having been read through, the House proceeded to consider it by sections.

Mr. ELA, of New-Hampshire, moved to amend the second section by striking out the Governor as elective officer, instead of being appointed.

Mr. COOK, of Illinois, Chairman of the Committee for the District of Columbia, opposed the amendment, and made a general statement in reference to the bill. There was one element which would allow the city to be one of the best governed cities in the country, and that was the control Congress had over it. The conservative element representing the Government of the United States should be preserved; but if the Governor and all other officers were to be elected, instead of appointed by the President, that element would be abandoned, and with it abandoned he would not give a farthing for any government that could be organized.

Mr. ELA advocated his amendment, and argued that to leave the Governor and Council to be appointed by the President would be an attack on the representative principle of the United States Government. He asserted that the tax-payers of the city were able to take care of their own interests, and that nowhere else in the country were life and property so safe as in the District of Columbia.

Mr. WOOD, of New-York, declared himself not opposed to intrusting to the President the power of appointing the Governor. In his judgment that power would be much safer than in the hands of the people of the District, who were of a very different class now from what they were ten years ago. The war had sent into the District a preponderating proportion of people who not only had no interests here, but who were really dissatisfied from properly comprehending and understanding the interests of others. He, for one, was not willing to trust the interests of his property to persons totally incapable of protecting their own interests. He would rather trust a Governor appointed by the President, and who was responsible for the character of his appointee, than trust one elected by the vox populi.

Mr. ELA inquired whether the gentleman was willing to see the same principle established in New-York City?

Mr. WOOD replied that there was no analogy between the two cases. New-York City was a portion of New-York State; but the District of Columbia belonged to the Government of the United States.

Mr. BINGHAM, of Ohio, made a constitutional argument in support of the provisions of the bill.

Mr. ELA'S amendment was rejected by a large majority.

On motion of Mr. COOK, the third section was amended by substituting for the words "House of Representatives" the words "House of Delegates."

Mr. HO

Chester Snow, of Boston, and W. B. Barrett, of Providence, are at the Grand Central Hotel. Commander Beardsley, of the United States Navy; Hon. C. S. Bushnell, of New-Haven, and R. FARES TO WASHINGTON.

A Threatening Controversy Between the Parties to the Monopoly—Jealousies and Rivalries—New Lines to be Established.

The subject of cheap fares from Washington to New-York and the West, which, with the commencement of each session of Congress, comes before the public, is exciting more than the usual amount of controversy this Winter. Hitherto all the talk has been aimed at the railroad companies, whose combination made the transportation of freight and passengers a monopoly in their hands. This Winter, however, they have fallen out among themselves, and one of the companies is industriously "hedging" against possible contingencies, by favoring the establishment of an "air-line" railroad from Washington to New-York.

The fact is, that so far from making every effort, as it has been reported, to raise the rates of fare, the companies between this City and Baltimore have been earnestly pressing upon the Baltimore and Ohio Company a proposition for a large reduction upon through fares, which proposition the latter Company has steadily refused to accept. There is consequently no little indignation against this Company, which struggles to maintain its well-known reputation as the enemy of New-York and Philadelphia. Although the Company has recently obtained a decision in its favor removing the State tax on passengers passing through the State, it still demands from the companies with which it is connected $1 45 for each passenger riding over its thirty-six miles of road from Baltimore to Washington. This sum includes twenty-five cents for transportation through the streets of Baltimore by horse-power—a process which every passenger knows to be too slow and tedious to be endured, except by the victims of a monopoly. At this rate, four cents per mile, a ticket from New-York to Washington, would cost $9 20. The companies north of Baltimore want to place the fares about twenty-five per cent. below this figure, and propose a pro rata division of a certain sum per mile to each company. It is now that the Company have some desire to promote the public interest, it may be mentioned that while the Baltimore and Ohio Company have clung to their time-honored method of conveyance through Baltimore, the united railroad companies of New-Jersey have built, at a cost of two and a quarter millions, the "Connecting Railway" in West Philadelphia, solely to avoid this tedious journey through the streets. While the Baltimore and Ohio Company charge 25 cents out of each through ticket for this tollsome ride, the united companies claim no extra charge for the transportation through West Philadelphia, by which a great saving of time is effected.

The consequences of this disagreement will undoubtedly result in the public benefit. A new road is being built from Baltimore to Washington, which will be finished early in April. With this road connection will be made by the Philadelphia, Wilmington and Baltimore Road; and when this is completed the stumbling-block in the way of cheap fares to Washington will be removed.

CURIOUS HOMICIDE.

A Man Said to Have Been Kicked to Death—Arrest of the Assailant—Unfortunate Result of a Quarrel.

EDWARD SAULSBURY, aged twenty-five, residing at No. 88 Frankfort-street, died yesterday from the effects of injuries sustained during a quarrel in Fulton-street with a man named JOHN GANNON. It appears that SAULSBURY was employed in the oyster stand of PHILLIPS & CARLEY, at Nos. 93 and 94 Fulton Market, and was, yesterday forenoon, quietly engaged in sweeping out the passage-way in front of his employer's stand, when he accidentally came in collision with GANNON, who is employed at a rival stand, and was passing SAULSBURY with a basket of oysters. The oysters were spilt on the floor, and the two men immediately began quarreling, finally abusing each other with curses and opprobrious epithets. These hard words being rapidly exchanged, led SAULSBURY to strike his opponent with his broom, when the men clinched and fell. They were immediately separated by the bystanders, and nothing more was thought of the matter during the forenoon until SAULSBURY began to complain of the excruciating pain in the region of his stomach, finally becoming so ill that he requested his friends to take him home. He was accordingly carried away from the market in a wagon, but became insensible as the vehicle reached the corner of Pearl and Frankfort streets, so the man was taken into the drug-store of CROWLY & BRODERICK, and placed in a chair. The druggist looked at SAULSBURY and informed his companion that there was no use to send for a physician as he could not possibly live. While the words were being uttered SAULSBURY suddenly vomited a quantity of blood and sank to the floor a corpse.

The Fourth Ward Police arrested GANNON on a charge of causing the death of SAULSBURY by kicking him in the abdomen. He denied having struck or kicked the deceased, but was locked up in the Oak-street cells to await the action of Coroner SCHIRMER, who had charge of the case. BENJAMIN RONE, a fellow employe of the deceased, SAULSBURY, and WM. SULLIVAN, the two men who saw the affray, were likewise detained by the Police as witnesses.

Deputy Coroner CHAHMAN viewed the remains yesterday afternoon, but could not make the necessary post-mortem examination so soon after death, so he had the body removed to the Morgue for that purpose. He impaneled a jury, however, and Coroner SCHIRMER will hold an inquest today. On the person of SAULSBURY were found $27 in money and a letter, which were handed over to the Coroner. It is believed from the purport of the letter that the deceased had no relatives in this City, but had a brother residing in Long Island City, to whom a telegram was sent desiring his presence at the Coroner's investigation. The homicide appears to have been entirely unpremeditated, and proved a very unfortunate result to a foolish quarrel.

Police Trials—A Policeman's Duty at a Place of Amusement.

Commissioner BARR heard twenty-one cases of complaints against policemen, yesterday, but the only case of public interest was that of Patrolman RYNDERS, of the Fifteenth Precinct. CHARLES W. FULLER, special officer at the New-York Circus, stated that, on the evening of the 2d inst., a man in the audience, occupying more seats than he had paid for, by placing his overcoat in one, he requested him to remove it, which he refused to do, and became so abusive in language and in disorderly conduct that he took hold of him, to put him out of the house. He had got him to the stairs, and was struggling with him there, when RYNDERS, who was on duty at the door, came in and asked what was the matter, when FULLER said that he was putting the man out, and RYNDERS said he must not molest the man. The evidence was not clear as to what occurred there, but the man was pushed out upon the sidewalk, where FULLER asked RYNDERS to arrest him, which he refused to do, but finally did take him to the Station-house as a complainant against FULLER. The latter, however, telling his story, Sergt. CHRISTEN refused to entertain the charge of assault and battery against him, and did locking the other man, whose name was CHARLES MCSHANE, on a charge of disorderly conduct. RYNDERS and MCSHANE both testified that FULLER had used unnecessary violence in dealing with the latter, and the former further said that when he went in where the struggle was occurring, on the stairs, and asked what was the matter, FULLER told him it was none of his business, to which RYNDERS answered that it was his business so interfere when he saw a breach of the peace being committed. It further appeared that since the affair FULLER has said to RYNDERS that, having great influence at head-quarters, he would "have him broke," and with this dead weight upon the case it was referred to the Board.

Criminal Work at the Court of General Sessions—Punishment of a Confidence Operator—The Attempted Escape at the Tombs—Discharge of the Burglar's Wife.

At the Court of General Sessions, yesterday, JOHN O'BRIEN, who was in the habit of earning a livelihood by intercepting messenger-boys on their way to stores and private houses, and of robbing them of packages and goods, which they were sent to deliver, by means of subterfuge, was sent to State Prison for five years. There were six separate charges made against him. Judge BEDFORD, in passing sentence, characterized his conduct as contemptible. MINNIE LEE, who pleaded guilty a few days ago to attempting to aid her husband, a burglar, to escape from the Tombs, was subsequently arraigned. Judge BEDFORD, addressing her, said: "You have pleaded guilty of an attempt to violate the law. There are many mitigating circumstances in your case. I believe you to be a young and deceived wife, but, unfortunately, married to a man now confined in the Tombs on a charge of burglary. On entering the prison door and undertaking to aid your husband to escape, I do not think you acted from the promptings of a wicked and debased nature. While I cannot for a moment countenance the offense of aiding a prisoner to escape, still I feel it to be my duty, considering your youth, respectability and previous good character, to postpone judgment in your case. You may go."

JAMES HEALY, who pleaded guilty on Thursday of stealing a watch from PATRICK BYRNES, was sent to State Prison for one year. MARY EAGAN was convicted of stealing $22 from WILLIAM ADDISON, and was sent to State Prison for one year. The Court then adjourned until Monday morning.

THE NEW CITY CENSUS.

Population of the Tenth, Eleventh, Thirteenth and Seventeenth Wards—Losses and Gains.

The census returns for the Tenth, Eleventh, Thirteenth and Seventeenth Wards were compiled at Marshal SHARPE's office yesterday. It will be observed by the annexed table that there is a slight decrease in the population of the Tenth, Eleventh and Seventeenth Wards, compared with the statistics prepared during last Summer. This loss in the Eleventh Ward is explained by the recent destruction of a row of tenement-houses in Leander-place, adjoining Tompkins-square; the tenants having removed to other localities. In the Tenth and Seventeenth Wards it is also supposed to have been caused by the removal of persons who were residents of those places in June last. In making assignments to the Assistant Marshals who took the last census, entirely new districts were given to them:

Locking Up Government Securities—Contemplated Prosecution of Bank Officers.

The practice known in financial circles as "locking up" money, prevails to a considerable extent among the banks of this City. It consists of keeping bonds and other securities in trust, and of withholding them from public circulation, frequently causing inconvenience, and sometimes a panic in the money market. By a Congressional act, passed on the 19th of February, 1863, the "locking up" of United States notes in national banks, either as security or as collateral security for any loan of money, is made a criminal offense, and is punishable by fine or imprisonment, or by both. The attention of the Federal authorities has recently been directed to this practice on the part of certain banks, and it was proposed to arrest and prosecute the bank officers in the United States Court, with a view of checking it. As yet, however, it has been found impossible to obtain the evidence necessary to convict any bank officer, as no one is willing to make an affidavit. The punishment provided by statute for the offense is imprisonment for not less than five years or nor more than ten years, in addition to which a fine is imposed of not over $1,000, and a sum forfeited by the bank equal to one-third of the money loaned on the Government securities which are "locked up."

The new Club-house of the Arion Society, in St. Mark's-place, between Second and Third avenues, is nearly completed, and will be inaugurated in about two or three weeks. The Society has purchased the houses Nos. 21 and 23, which have been thoroughly renovated and transformed into a splendid club-house, which is covered by a Mansard roof, containing apartments for the keeper of the building. ILL-GOTTEN GAINS.

Extensive Post-Office Larceny and Embezzlement by an Agent—The Accused Held for Examination on Three Complaints.

WILLIAM CANEY, a member of the firm of WATROUS, BOYDEN, FAY & Co., doing a fur business at No. 275 Broadway, appeared before Justice DOWLING, yesterday, at the Tombs Court, and preferred a complaint of larceny and embezzlement against CHARLES E. LITTLEFIELD, the traveling commission agent of the firm. It appears that LITTLEFIELD had been in the employ of the house for nearly a year, and enjoyed, until recently, the full confidence of his employers, having traveled extensively throughout the Union and procured a large number of orders for his firm. A few days ago a letter was received from Messrs. F. H. STEVENS & Co., of Fredonia, N. Y., giving details of fur sales made on consignment for the New-York house, in which mention was made of a check for $383 15 forwarded by them on the 12th inst. As no such check had come to hand, the firm made inquiries, which led them to suspect LITTLEFIELD of having tampered with their mails. He was accordingly arrested, and when searched found in possession of the letter and account of sales made by Messrs. STEVENS & Co., and also a letter written by L. D. CRANDALL, of Warren, Penn., inclosing a draft on the Importers' and Traders' Bank, of this City, for $75, another for $20 on the Ninth National Bank, and a third on HOWES & MACY, for $110 35. The prisoner also surrendered a third letter written to the firm by F. V. SMITH & Co., of Coldwater, Mich., inclosing a draft for $383 80. None of these checks or drafts were found, however, but on further investigation it was ascertained that the prisoner had indorsed the signature of the firm to each and received the money thereon, which he appropriated to his own benefit.

The Magistrate listened to the statements of the complainants, who exhibited the letters found on the person of LITTLEFIELD, when he ordered his clerk to prepared separate affidavits in each case, which being done, the prisoner was remanded until today for examination. The persons from whom LITTLEFIELD obtained the money on the drafts and check will then testify as to the method of his proceedings. The prisoner is about twenty-eight years of age and rather prepossessing in his appearance. He seemed to take the matter of his arrest on such serious charges with an air of indifference, though he watched the proceedings with apparent interest. Several other complaints are to be preferred against him, as Messrs. WATROUS, BOYDEN, FAY & Co. have discovered other instances where LITTLEFIELD has stolen drafts and checks, and appropriated the money received theron.

UNITED STATES SUPREME COURT.

No. 77.—Jas. M. Downey vs. Wm. D. Nutt.—Error to the Supreme Court of Appeals of Virginia. This was an action of ejectment to recover possession of land in Virginia, sold under the act of 1863, for the collection of direct taxes in insurrectionary districts, and of which the plaintiff in error was the assignee of the purchaser. The judgment below was for the claimant, the original owner, and the case came here upon the theory that the Court erred in its ruling, and that the sale vested the title in Downey.

The defendant in error contends that the act of Congress under which the sale was made, in fact, was not assume to impose a penalty of fifty per centum in addition to the assessed tax, and to make both the penalty and the tax a lien on the land, is unconstitutional, because the penalty is not a means "plainly adopted to the end" of collecting the tax. The sale was void, because by the seventh section of the act, as amended by the act of 1863, the Board of Tax Commissioners were required to strike off the property to the United States at two-thirds of its assessed value, which not included in the certificate of the Commissioners is not conclusive evidence of the regularity of the sale; nor is it within the power of Congress to give the certificate such an effect in a judicial proceeding instituted by the owner to impeach the sale, for the power of Congress to impose direct taxes is not disputed; but the validity of any enactment, directing, regulating and limiting the mode of inquiry to be pursued by the citizen in the judicial investigation to which, by the common law and natural justice, he is entitled in contesting the regularity of a summary proceeding, by which he has been deprived of his property, is denied. But the certificate is void on its face, because by its own recitals the requirements of the law were not complied with in respect to notice. The sale made by the Tax Commissioner is void because the property was capable of subdivision, and the whole was sold, when the sale of a small portion would have sufficed to pay the whole assessment. But the sale was void, because a penalty of fifteen per cent. was imposed and collected, when there is no warrant for such a penalty in the law; and therefore, no such tax was due.

J. Willoughby for plaintiff in error; R. T. Merrick for defendant.

No. 78.—The Mayor, &c., of Baltimore vs. The Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company.—Error to the Circuit Court for the District of Maryland. The railroad being in 1853, in many respects, incomplete, and the Municipal Corporation regarding it as a work of public utility, the latter agreed to lend the former $4,000,000, and to issue the money for the purpose, issued bonds of the city for $5,000,000, payable with interest semi-annually (in the meanwhile) in 1890. The Railroad Company mortgaged its property of all sorts to the city to secure the loan. the city keeping in its possession $500,000 as a sinking fund. The city paid the Company the sums required by it as demanded, and the Company paid the city the interest on the $5,000,000 without deduction until after the passage of the Internal Revenue act of 1862, when the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, insisting that the Company's mortgage was an evidence of indebtedness within the meaning of the act, obliged it to pay the income tax thereon to avoid distress. This tax the Company then deducted from the interest payments to the city. The latter demurred. There was a joint and unsuccessful attempt to satisfy the Commissioner that the case did not fall within the scope of the act of 1862, and the Company still refusing to pay the city what had already been paid to the Commissioner of Internal Revenue, the latter brought an action for the amount in the State Courts of Maryland. The case was removed into the United States Court, when, the decision being against the city, the writ of error was sued out to have the judgment reviewed here. The questions which arise are these: First—Is the case one that falls within the scope of the Internal Revenue act? And secondly: If it is, and the United States have a right to demand the payment of the tax in question, is the Railroad Company bound, having paid it, to pay to the city the interest on the debt without deduction?

On the first point the counsel agree, and the same positions are assumed in respect to it. As to the second point, the obligation of the Company to pay to the city the full amount of interest without deduction turns on the construction put upon the words following, from the contract between the parties: "And (the Company) shall pay all and any expenses incident to the issue of any bonds, whether currency or sterling." The mortgage bears date Feb. 16, 1854, and the defendant in error insists that as at that time there was no income tax, nor any reasonable expectation of one, the expenses incident to the issue of the bonds were such as related to the preparation of them, and such books and clerk hire as might be required in connection with them, and nothing else, and it is said that the effect of the language is too plain to require argument. The question in this respect is one of grammar rather than of law.

The city contends that as the Company is the principal and the city the security, the situation of the latter can never be more onerous than that of the former. The possibility of taxation should have been foreseen by the principal, and it is a part of its obligations to indemnify the surety. If there is any hardship in the taxation it is one which the borrower contracted to bear, and is a part of the obligation of his contract.

W. H. Norris and George H. Chandler for the city; J. H. B. Latrobe for the Company.

SUPREME COURT—CHAMBERS—JAN. 20.

Before Judge Sutherland.

THE NEW-YORK THEATRE—MOTION TO OPEN A JUDGMENT.

Preserved Gaige vs. Lucy Rushton.—From the statement of counsel and the papers in the case, it appears that in 1866 the defendant, then the lessee of the New-York Theatre, being about to bring out a new piece, and not having sufficient funds wherewith to do it, Mr. H. H. Davis, the treasurer of the threatre, issued some checks on which the necessary money was borrowed. Some of these checks came into the hands of the plaintiff, and the money not being paid at the stipulated time, a suit was brought in this Court to recover it. The defendant was out of town and consequently a judgment was taken by default. The case came up today on a motion made by her counsel to set aside the judgment. The defendant claims that at the time these checks were issued she was not the proprietor of the theatre; that although her name was used she was not the real party in interest, but that the theatre was run in the interest and for the benefit of Mr. Davis, the treasurer. She claims that as soon as she returned to this City and became aware of the judgment against her, she took measures to have the default opened. After argument, the Court took the papers and reserved the decision.

Mr. Stanton for the motion; Mr. H. F. Hatch opposed.

Before Judge Van Brunt.

IMPORTANT QUESTION AS TO INSOLVENT NATIONAL BANKS.

Tracy vs. The Receiver of National Bank of Selma.—This case was called today. The plaintiff had obtained levy of attachment upon assets in New-York of the Selma Bank, after its failure was known and its doors closed, but before the appointment of a receiver under the provisions of act of Congress; and his attorney claimed that the lien could not possibly be divested by the subsequent appointment of a receiver. He insisted that the attachment had been properly obtained against the Selma Bank as a foreign corporation.

It was claimed, on behalf of the Receiver, that, if the bank was foreign, it must be so by virtue of its organic law—the act of Congress—and that, in such case, all national banks must necessarily be held foreign, and those doing business in New-York to be violators of the New-York statute, which prhibit foriegn banking corporations from doing business within its limits. His counsel further strenuously claimed that equality of distribution of an insolvent national bank's assets was the intent of the provisions of the act of Congress, which requires the assets to be paid into the public treasury, and then divided among creditors equally; that the trust in these assets springs into existence in the Government officers, upon commission of act of insolvency, or closing of the bank's doors; and that to permit particular creditors to obtain advantage by local attachment, while the requisite steps for appointment of receiver are progressing, would be a manifest violation of the act of Congress and the Federal Constitution. The Judge suggested that as the questions were questions of law, he preferred to have the jury withdrawn, and reserved his decision.

Eugene Smith for plaintiff; Sterne Chittenden for defendant.

FRIDAY, Jan. 20—P. M.

The Stock Exchange seems today to have taken a determined upward course on New-York Central and some of the Western Roads, and is generally active, at advancing prices. The "Circular" raids upon such properties as the New-York Central, Lake Shore, North-west, &c., while inducing a good many of the Street operators to sell short, thus running up, from week to week, a pretty large aggregate of contracts in this bearish interest, has failed to bring out much Stock from actual holders. And now that the old friends of the Vanderbilt and Western Roads have taken the field as free buyers for Cash, the effect is seen in a sharp advance in prices and felt in a scarcity of stock for cash delivery. No attempt, we understand, is being made by these buyers in the direction of a "corner," nor have they as yet studied to make the stock difficult to borrow; but, nevertheless, they evidently go about their business with an earnestness not heretofore, for some months past, known to the market. Another feature in the speculations of the Stock Board and the Long Room, is the new interest manifested in the Stock and Bonds of the Union Pacific Road, which not only rise rapidly, but are speculated in, especially the Stock, to an extent that is doing the Commission Brokers a welcome service in the way of Commissions. The Stock has nearly doubled in price in the last week or ten days. It has gone up altogether from 19 to 20½ @ cent.—from 17@19 yesterday to 21½@22½ this morning. The Income Bonds have gone up from 35 @38 to 56½@57 @ cent.; the Land Grants from 42@45 to 66@68 @ cent.; the First Mortgages, 73½ to 77 @ cent. The reasons for this recovery are variously given on the Street, though they ought to be of difficult solution after so great a breakdown in the credit of the Company at the close of the Old Year, and the prompt payment of the January interest, and the adjustment of the affairs of Mr. OAKES AMES, which were intimately connected with the Road. Another rational influence on the Bonds and Stock is the understanding that after the March election the Road, in a certain measure, will come into New-York Central, although the principal office may continue in Boston.

The Gold market was a fraction firmer early in the day, sales at 110¼@110⅜ @ cent., but left off no higher than yesterday, although Bills on London were active at extreme rates, 60-days 109½@109⅝, and sight and short sight 110@110⅛ @ cent.

Money was in liberal supply at 7 @ cent., and if the manipulations to make it scarce or to weaken the Bank averages on Greenbacks have not yet been given over, they are evidently powerless for the objects in view.

The Public Funds, if not so buoyant as the Railways at the Stock Exchange, are held with much

NEWS OF THE DAY.

THE WAR.

WILLIAM of Prussia was proclaimed Emperor of Germany, on Thursday, in the "Hall of Mirrors," at Versailles, in the presence of all the German Princes and representatives of the regiments of the army. A grand military pageant took place in Versailles on the occasion of the event. All the members of the Diplomatic Corps in Paris except Mr. WASHBURNE applied for permission to pass through the Prussian lines, but were refused permission by the Prussian military authorities. The bombardment of Paris continued on the 18th with increasing vigor. The Duke of MECKLENBURG is said to be marching on Rennes by way of Mayence, with the object of cutting off Gen. CHANZY's retreat, or of turning his flank. The remaining troops at Cherbourg have been ordered into the field. The French Army of the North continues to advance. Earl GRANVILLE has accepted the indemnity offered by Prussia for the destruction of the English colliers in the Seine. King WILLIAM congratulates the Queen at Berlin, that Gen. BOURBAKI has been repulsed and is in full retreat. The repulse is confirmed by dispatches from various other sources. The fighting continued three days, Sunday, Monday and Tuesday, and all the assaults upon Gen. VERDER's position were repulsed with heavy loss to the French, who finally gave up the endeavor to relieve Belfort, and withdrew to their former positions. Avallon was bombarded until evacuated by the Germans. The Bremen steamer sailed on Wednesday from Havana, but put back, having found two French men-of-war in the offing. She afterward left, accompanied by the German man-of-war Koln.

CONGRESS.

In the Senate, yesterday, the certificate of election of FOSTER BLADGETT as a Senator from Georgia for the next term, was read and tabled. Mr. SUMNER presented a communication from the Colored Convention, recently in session in Washington, asking the passage of his bill supplimentary to the Civil Rights acts, giving equal rights in railroads cars, hotels, &c. He expressed his sympathy with the prayer of the petitioners, and appealed to Mr. TRUMBULL, Chairman of the Judiciary Committee, not longer to delay the remedial legislation. Mr. TRUMBULL replying, showed that Mr. SUMNER's bill was reported from his Committee last July, and indefinitely postponed by the Senate. Mr. SUMNER then introduced another bill, substantially the same as the original, and this was referred in regular order to the Judiciary Committee. A bill was introduced by Mr. CONKLING incorporating the New-York Port Tunnel Company with authority to tunnel the Hudson and East rivers, which was referred. The Commerce Committee reported adversely the joint resolution accepting the proposals of the International Steam-ship Company for placing iron steam-ships in the Trans-Atlantic service, and they were indefinitely postponed. Mr. MYE made a long speech in favor of the bill paying over to the Sutro Tunnel Company the proceeds of the United States from the sale of mineral lands. Some new business of minor importance was introduced, and then the bill to refund the interest and discount on money borrowed for military purposes by States during the war was taken up, and debated during the remainder of the session. The Income Tax repeal was made the special order for Tuesday next. The Senate adjourned until Monday.

In the House a petition was presented from New-York merchants in favor of the appointment of Commissioners to audit and pay the Alabama claims. A number of private bills were considered and passed, and then the Diplomatic Appropriation bill was taken up and discussed in Committee of the Whole. The debate was entirely on Mr. WOOD'S motion to limit the expenditures of the Secret Service Fund of the State Department so that none of it shall be used in connection with the annexation of San Domingo. Mr. BUTLER opposed the amendment, and Messrs. ELDRIDGE and COX indorsed it, both advocating the abolition of the fund. Mr. KELSEY, of New-York, created considerable merriment at the expense of the latter gentlemen by having read extracts from their speeches last session in opposition to an amendment proposed by himself at that time, requiring vouchers to be filed showing the distribution of that fund. The amendment was rejected, and then, without completing the bill, the House proceeded to the consideration of District of Columbia business. During a debate on the bill to provide a government for the District, the woman-suffrage question was brought up. Mr. JULIAN moved to amend the sixth section, which gives the elective franchise to all male citizens of the United States, by striking out the word "male;" and he requested a vote by yeas and nays. This was taken, and resulted as follows: yeas 55, nays 115. With some slight amendments the bill was passed. It proposes a territorial government for the district. The Army Appropriation bill, appropriating $27,475,000, was reported and assigned for Thursday, and then the House adjourned.

THE STATE LEGISLATURE.

Bills were introduced, yesterday, in the Senate, to amend the Code of Procedure, and to authorize the "Manhattan Railroad Company" to construct an under-ground railroad in New-York. Notice was given of a bill to incorporate the East River and Bushwick Under-ground Railroad Company. The bill to secure a just division of the estates of debtors among creditors was ordered to a third reading. The Senate then adjourned till Monday evening. In the Assembly, a petition from 17,000 tax-payers of Brooklyn, asking the restoration of the former rates of salaries for Brooklyn policemen, was presented. The bill providing for the holding of elections of town officers in Richmond County was passed. Among the bills introduced was one to compel the gas companies of New-York and Brooklyn to report annually to the Controller, and that authorizing the "Manhattan Railway Company" to construct an under-ground railway in New-York; also one relating to the transfer to the State of surplus funds in savings banks. A long debate on the disposition to be made of the bill relating to the railroad ferry at Ticonderoga ensued, and and it was transferred from the Railroad Committee to the Committee on Commerce and Navigation. The House then adjourned till Monday evening.

The Republican Party Out for Danger.

The Irish refugees who landed by the Cuba have more sense in their five heads than all the deputations which went to meet them put together. After the Federal officials had gone down on their knees to them, and the Tammany crew had disgusted them with slavish civilities, Mr. O'DONOVAN ROSSA and his friends quietly and firmly declined to go with either of the deputations. They said to the half-drunken crowd: "It is painful to us to-night to see so much dissension among yourselves. For what your reception concerns us as individuals we care little, compared to what we feel about it, in connection with the interest of Irish independence; and, as you have not united harmoniously to receive us, we will not"—accept your hospitality. In a word, they refused to go with either Mr. MURPHY, or either of the other contending factions, and took up their quarters at a hotel of their own choosing. We can assure these men that by pursuing this dignified course, they have won more respect and sympathy from the general public than they could have ever obtained from being paraded in procession through the streets, like a traveling circus or a menagerie.

Mr. O'DONOVAN ROSSA has seen something before of those dissensions, bickerings, and treacheries which are the curse of his country, and have always gone so far to ruin every Irish cause. It must have been a melancholy thing for him to have witnessed an exhibition of these same qualities on the very night of his arrival in the New World. The faults of the Irish race are not confined, as he will discover, to Ireland. If a Fenian raid upon Canada is projected here, who are the first to betray it?—Americans, Englishmen, Germans, Scotchmen? No—the information which frustrates the plot is always conveyed to the Government by Fenians themselves. As with great matters, so with small. Those deputations which went off to the Cuba had not the decency to refrain from fighting with each other under the very eyes of the exiles. They could not agree—they could not even act like rational men. Probably Mr. O'DONOVAN ROSSA expected to find unanimity in Irish councils here. There is no tyrannical government, no secret police, no "British dungeons" to be afraid of. But he has seen already an example of the very faults which he and other intelligent Irishmen have so often tried to combat, and tried in vain.

As for the politicians, Mr. ROSSA and his friends are men of sense, as their rebuke to the howling crowd who met them proves, and they will soon find out that their reception is not intended as a compliment to them. They are simply regarded as handy material out of which to make political capital. Neither Collector MURPHY, nor Mr. TWEED, nor Mr. SWEENY, would care a jot if the "exiles" had all fallen in the river, or had been torn to pieces by the lunatics who quarreled over them, like vultures over their prey. Mr. ROSSA may not quite understand at present the exact position held in the community by Tammany. There was an Irishman once, and a very good Irishman, too, who was quite as sincere in wishing to free Ireland as Mr. O'DONOVAN ROSSA or any of his friends. He was known as Miles O'Reilly, and this is the way in which he wrote of the very men who are now trying to use the Irish exiles for their own purposes:

They have seized all posts of power and pride,
They mock as vain our passionate struggle,
Conscious how well is fortified
Their rule of theft and juggle.
They think us weak, for they know how long
We have borne their sway of shame and plunder—
Up, brothers, now against the wrong;
Up, in one effort fierce and strong,
And rend their villainous Ring asunder.
Up, for our City's tarnished fame—
Let justice urge and manhood quicken;
Up, ere we grow quite dead to shame,
With moral palsy stricken;
Up, and hunt down this brood of Theft,
As bloodhounds bay the wolf's hot haunches;
Up, ere of all we prize bereft;
Up, and—if nothing else be left—
Let's swing the rogues on gallows-branches.

We hope the Citizen will pardon us for quoting these verses—but there they are, and the truths contained in them are as undeniable to-day as they were when written. Moreover, if Mr. ROSSA and his companions really wish to form an intelligent opinion about the characters, lives, and objects of the Democratic rulers of this City, we entreat them to read the World, a Democratic newspaper, "organ of the party," &c., of February, March, and April last.

Probably these exiles expected to see the United States Government acting with a little more independence than the Tammany hordes. If so, they were disappointed in that anticipation also. The United States flag was dragged under the feet of the rabble who had assembled at the bidding of TWEED and SWEENY. The Republican Party has never sought to win the Irish vote by abject sycophancy to Irishmen. It has left that sort of work to the notorious rogues who use the ignorance of others as the ladder by which they rise to power. For the first time, the Federal Government has now been dragged into competition with Tammany by its own officials. We hope President GRANT is satisfied with this latest effort to "reconstruct" the Republican Party. We hope he is satisfied that it will heal all divisions in the party. We are, it appears, to try and beat the Tweedites at their own game. We are to ignore the claims of all other classes of citizens, in order to try and share the Irish vote with Tammany. It is a truly brilliant conception. The author of it ought to have a statue erected to him twice as high as Mr. TWEED'S, and to be remembered as the man who performed greater services for his party and the country than Mr. LINCOLN, or Gen. GRANT, or any of the leaders the people once delighted to honor. Whatever may be the President's opinion of all this, we can only say that the attitude of the Federal officials contrasts very badly with the manly behaviour of the poor refugees. If we could only hope that Mr. ROSSA and his friends would continue to repulse the politicians on both sides, and refuse to be made tools of by men who do not value them at a pin's point, they would confer a substantial and striking honor upon the country which gave them birth, and gain a place in public estimation which they may seek in vain through the foul channels of local politics.

What Ought the Germans to Do?

One would think, from the outcry of a portion of the British and American Press about the Germans continuing the war with the French for the sake of a little strip of territory and a money indemnity, that no nation ever before was actuated by such greedy and ambitious motives. We hear from the London Spectator that the justifiable anger of the German race at the unprovoked attack of NAPOLEON upon them is converted into a wicked lust of territory. From the World and kindred organs here, we hear of "the ambition," the "greed," the pride and bloodthirsty cruelty of King WILLIAM'S councilors in prolonging a terrible war against an unfortunate people from base and selfish motives. The same organs, too, both in England and America, reason about the war much as the Tory Press of Great Britain did in regard to our civil war. The Times and the London Post, and other journals, then could hardly find words of pious condemnation lefty and severe enough to express their disapproval of the bloody and fratricidal spirit of the North, in continuing so devastating a war. The popular view at English breakfast tables at that period of the American character, was that it had become depraved by war, and thirsted for blood and slaughter. While we were tearfully sending forth our sons and brothers to die for their country, we were supposed to be continuing a useless slaughter merely from a brutal love of sensation, and from a sinful ambition. The tone of the London Spectator—from which better things were to be expected—is now precisely similar in regard to the spirit and sacrifices of the Germans, and the uselessness of the war. The French are written of, as to their ultimate chances, precisely as the Confederates were by the British Tory Press.

Now what would these writers have the Germans do? Are they to pack up their siege-trains and break up their camps, and, after having lost a couple of hundred thousand of the best youth of Germany, to ignominiously and penitentially retreat to the Rhine, with a million of enraged Frenchmen besetting their line of march?

After being suddenly attacked, under one of the most ridiculous pretexts ever avowed in modern diplomacy, and, contrary to the expectation of the world, having temporarily beaten down their adversary, with a loss to themselves in men and treasure which the gains of a half century to come will not replace—are they meekly to say, "We have hurt each other enough! Now let us be quits, and leave things just as they are!" Any nation, with the smallest remnant of manhood, after such an unprovoked war and such terrible losses, would cast out their leaders to perpetual disgrace if they counseled such a course. Neither FREDERICK WILLIAM nor BISMARCK could hold their places a day in Germany if they carried it out. The Germans naturally demand satisfaction for the future: some pledge that an unprovoked assault will not be repeated, and some indemnity for the past. What, exactly, this pledge or this indemnity shall be, neither the King nor VON BISMARCK has yet indicated. Whether it must be all of Alsace and Lorraine, or only a portion, or whether it will be in money or land, no mortal yet knows. The German Minister is tolerably sharp, and is not likely to avow before a bargain what he will take. If he has indicated anything, we may be sure he will, like any other good negotiator, accept a good deal less than he has proclaimed.

And if France does lose a strip of her territory, why should it be thought so terrible a a calamity to her, or the gaining of it so great a sin in Germany? France has inflicted such losses a hundred times in her history on others. She won this very territory from Germany by just such means as Germany will now win it from her. There is no nation in Europe that has not built up its possessions by successful wars. The British Empire is cemented by blood, and its best provinces have been won by fire and sword. Germany is not a country of philanthropists and saints. The average German, like the average Englishman, if he has fought a bloody battle, desires to wrest a fair indemnity from his enemy. With all his philosophy and Christianity, he has not yet arrived at the position to which, apparently, the Spectator and the World would affectionately lead him, where, having risked life and property to vanquish a formidable assailant, he humanely lets him go, and furnishes him arms to attack again. The obstacle to peace now is with the French. As M. GUIZOT has lately so powerfully demonstrated, they have no popular Government.

There are dictators, indeed, and a form of a republic, but no one knows what the will of the people is; whether it wants peace or war. M. GAMBETTA will not allow a National Assembly to be called. The Prussians have no Government to treat with, and if they should conclude a treaty with Gen. TROCHU or M. GAMBETTA, the future Assembly might reverse it all in a month. If the present dictators were not afraid that a National Assembly would overthrow them, they would undoubtedly long ere this have called one, and have concluded a peace.

Attacks Upon the Treasury.

The present session of Congress, unprofitable as it promises to be in respect of measures conceived in the public interest, furnishes rather more than its share of bills involving an expenditure of public money. The land-grant bills are numerous and bad enough, and it is already evident that there are members willing to swallow their pledges and defy public opinion by appropriating the choicest portions of the public domain for the benefit of railway schemers. Separately, these projects would have no chance of success. But combined they represent so many sinister interests that there is no telling what power they may not acquire before the session ends. The promoters of subsidy schemes, involving money and not land, will, however, make the first attack. They are organized and not over scrupulous, and all the virtue of Congress will be needed to protect the National Treasury from their assaults.

Of steam-ship enterprises there is a formidable list, and the opening trial of strength in their behalf will come off next week. They are eight in number, and take in nearly all parts of the world. The Sandwich Islands' service is the most modest of the group, contenting itself with a request for $75,000 annually; the American and European and the American Mail and Ocean Steam Transportation Company are the most rapacious, the money they ask for amounting yearly to $1,200,000 for each. The aggregate of the subsidies covered by the eight projects exceed four and a half millions yearly,—a heavy demand in prosperous times, and a very serious one in times like these. The utmost that can be said in support of the principle is, that it is debatable as a method of fostering a steam marine. But there are two sides to the question, and one of them is strengthened by the popular demand for reduction of taxation, to which every fresh subsidy is more or less of an obstacle. The danger to be apprehended is the formation of a Ring, with a powerful lobby to help it,—the associated influences boding no good to the Treasury or the tax-payers.

The gigantic scheme of the day is that of which the economical Mr. HAMLIN has made himself the sponsor. For the purpose of cheapening the cost of transportation from the West to the sea-board, a railroad is projected from Portland to Chicago; and to facilitate its construction, the bill provides for a Government loan at the rate of fifty thousand dollars per mile for the whole extent of the road. As the distance cannot be less than a thousand miles, we have here a drain upon the national credit amounting at least to fifty millions of dollars. Mr. HAMLIN is not addicted to practical jokes in the Senate Chamber, and we must therefore conclude that he introduces this monster scheme in sober earnestness. We adduce it as illustrative of the tendency to press extravagant demands upon the Government, with an inexcusable indifference to the effect upon its credit and the business interests of the country.

Compared with an undertaking of this magnitude, the never-ending Sutro Tunnel seems a model of disinterestedness. It comes, this time, neatly wrapped in a bill "to create a fund to be known as 'The mineral land fund,' and for other purposes," and Mr. NYE exerts his ingenuity in finding pretexts for its passage. We think he will not succeed. A loan of three millions to the Sutro Tunnel Company is a bagatelle by the side of Mr. HAMLIN'S fifty millions; but it is three millions too much for the furtherance of private interests, which should be quite capable of caring for themselves. Expatiate as Mr. NYE may upon the scientific value of the tunnel, the fact remains that the Sutro Company is no more entitled to public aid than scores of other corporations, and that its legitimate reliance should be upon the Nevada mining companies, whose hidden riches, we are told, surpass description. Properties which, according to Mr. NYE, have yielded more silver than all Mexico, and are yet but at the gateway of their treasures, should surely not be afraid of a three million expenditure, which is alleged to be essential to their development. At any rate, the country is under no obligation to redeem from loss mismanaged ventures on the Comstock Lode, or to swell the dividends of those that have been more fortunate.

If we are ever to bring back the days of hard money and light taxation, it is plain that Congress must resist attempts to fasten upon the Treasury plans involving the expenditure of its money, or an application of its credit, for the furtherance of corporate enterprises. We advise Senators and members to remember that the strain upon the nation's credit is severe enough already, and that there can be no restoration of confidence until the subsidizing system is firmly and consistently discouraged.

Decoy Directors.

The recent failures of three insurance companies, two of which involve very suspicious circumstances, if not fraud itself, ought to suggest some inquiry respecting the degree of responsibility attaching to the directory of such institutions. Except where fraud or gross mismanagement can be traced to the votes or personal action of the Board of Directors, it is admitted that those gentlemen cannot be held to any legal accountability. But, it appears to us that there is a moral liability incurred by the acceptance and holding of these trusteeships, of which many of these persons are utterly unconscious.

The directors of a corporate institution are supposed to be elected to that position with a view of giving the stockholders a controlling representation in the administration, and also for the purpose of attracting public confidence to the institution itself. In either respect, the position is one of trust and honor, and places the incumbent where he has to perform the double duty of protecting the capital of his constituents, and of maintaining the right of the bank or company to the confidence of the community. His name is, to the extent of his personal influence, a sort of guarantee as regards the public, who naturally infer, from his prominent connection with the concern, that they are safe in trusting it. If, by reason of indolence or indifference, a director neglects his plain duty in the premises, and omits all oversight while irregularity and extravagance, or perhaps peculation, are running riot, he certainly has no valid plea of immunity, and cannot reasonably expect to escape censure. There may be no pecuniary penalty for such neglect of duty; but surely the public should not be exposed a second time, or in any other connection, to loss or deception through such a medium. Nor should such a faithless trustee be permitted to represent his fellow-investors in any future financial schemes.

As matters are now managed, directors seem to be considered of no sort of account except as the electoral college whose votes make or unmake the officers. By a reciprocal arrangement, the officers, by means of a constant supply of proxies, choose their own board of directors, so that between the two stools the poor shareholders, or policyholders, have to be content with a seat on the ground. The meetings of these boards, occurring only once a month, or, as is often the case, once in three months, are a mere farce as respects any practical effect; the committees amount to little or nothing, auditing in blissful ignorance whatever they are told to audit; and, as to assuming any supervision over the arrangements, they know that such an assumption would be deemed an irregular procedure. Throughout their term of office, these respectable and trusted gentlemen seem never to realize that they have either duties to perform or responsibilities to meet.

The failure of the Home Insurance Company of New-Haven, and that of at least one of the Life Insurance Companies in this City, have brought into bold relief the fact that the directors of these institutions were mere figure-heads, whose names bolstered them up and entrapped the public. It is the judgment of charity to believe that they were innocent, through ignorance or carelessness, of what a mass of rottenness they officially presided over. But this is small comfort to the stockholders and policyholders whose interests so fatally lapsed into nothingness under their so-called direction. And such of them as were, in fact, cognizant of what was going on in the way of reckless management and extravagant expenditure are morally responsible for failing to expose it. Where, led by suspicion or actual knowledge, any of these gentlemen resigned in time to save their own reputations, they merely owed it to the public by way of explanation and information.

That there are Boards of Directors, some of whose members appreciate the responsibilities of their position, we are fully aware; but their number is comparatively small. What has been said loses none of its force as applied to these bodies as a rule; the exceptions and their noteworthy character are the strongest proof of this. If doubt exists on this point, let the reader apply for further information to some friend who has the honor to be a "director" anywhere.

Riparian Rights in New-Jersey.

The vexed question of riparian rights is to come again before the New-Jersey Courts. For many years the shore-owner was supposed to own the property under water, and built docks and wharfs indiscriminately, or according to lines defined by resolutions of town committees or councils. Several years ago, the Legislature of New-Jersey passed the "Wharf act," by which a commission of the Board of Chosen Freeholders—a body elected in the same manner and with powers similar to the Board of Supervisors in New-York—was empowered to grant licenses to applicants to build docks, wharfs, or piers beyond low water-mark. Under the provisions of this act, the Freeholders of the various counties have granted many licenses, and in Hudson County many of the docks at Jersey City and Hoboken were authorized. Some four or five years since a special act was passed by which the lands under water on the Hudson River and Kill von Kull were placed under charge of a State Commission appointed by the Governor, and including the Attorney-General of the State. Owing to the increased value of the dock front in this City, the Cunard and Hamburg steamers had taken wharfs at Jersey City and Hoboken respectively, and the value of the adjoining lands had been so materially increased that it had become of great importance to the shore-owners. The joint companies of New-Jersey, desirous to extend their docks on Harsimer's Cove, paid to the State $500,000, and the New-Jersey Central Railroad Company and their branch, the Newark and New-York Road, also agreed to pay large amounts for the land under water at Communipaw. The operations of the Central Company in filling in this land were so extensive, that efforts were made by the New-York authorities to stop it, which gave rise to a suit between the representatives of the two States as to the control of the harbor. This suit was decided some two years since, in the Court of Appeals at Albany, against the New-York claim, and the operations of the Company have been continued since, a large amount of land having been filled in and reclaimed.

In 1868 the Paterson and Newark Railroad was chartered, and built the line along the Passaic River, from Woodside to its present terminus in Newark, on piles driven in front of the property of the shore-owners, and without compensating them for the privilege. Mr. FREDERICK STEVENS, the owner of one of these fronts, had an old dock, which was torn up by the Company to make room for the piling. Suits were at once commenced in the Court of Errors, and after long litigation, the Court recently rendered a decision, the main points of which are as follows:

1. That the State owns the bed of navigable waters in her own property as representative of the public, from high-water mark.

2. That she does not hold this property in trust for navigation, as contended by one class of legal thinkers, but as any other owner does, to do with it as she will.

3. That ownership of land in navigable water gives the owner, as such, no right. He has control of his own property, and therefore can pass therefrom into or upon the water, which no other person can do. But the right of fishing, boating, watering cattle, bathing, or any other privilege exercisable in or on the water, he holds as a member of the community; with no more right than any other citizen, though possessing the advantage of exercising these rights with greater convenience.

4. Hence, when the Legislature grants the land under water away, for any purpose, public or private, it passes, and no right exists in the riparian owner to any compensation.

5. The only right belonging to the riparian owner is property in any addition to the soil produced either by natural accretion, or by filling in.

This decision, it was thought, would settle the question so far as the right of the State was concerned, but the same Judges, by a vote of 12 to 1, declared that the Legislature had not given the Paterson Railroad Company a grant of land over the Passaic River in front of Mr. STEVENS' land, and hence had no title to it. That gentleman, with other aggrieved neighbors, thereupon gave notice that application will be made on Monday next to the Directors of the Boards of Chosen Freeholders of Essex and Hudson Counties, and the Commissioners of the same, as agents of the State, for licenses to be granted to them to construct wharves in front of their lands. The Railroad Company, in the meanwhile, have been increasing the width of their track and laying extra rails, without obtaining any authority from the State, and Mr. STEVENS has again applied to the Chancellor for an injunction to restrain them from such proceeding, which will revive the matter in the Courts.

A State Commission, consisting of Ex-Gov. NEWELL, Judge B. F. RANDOLPH, and Gen. FITZ JOHN PORTER, has also been appointed, to estimate the value of submerged lands in the easterly portion of the State, under the provisions of the Driggs Draining bill, passed last Winter.

The whole subject is one of great importance, not only to the property owners but also to the State, in view of the enormous value of these lands and the revenue accruing therefrom.

MINOR TOPICS.

Disaster and still disaster is the unvarying tenor of the dispatches regarding the French armies. FAIDHERBE shows by the slowness of his movements his inability to cope with the army opposed to him. BOURBAKI confesses to a defeat in the East, and CHANZY, continuing the line of march we indicated yesterday, is being headed off by a portion of the second German Army, determined to prevent his escape northward out from the cul-de-sac into which they are rapidly driving him. That the [illegible] of Paris continues with good [illegible] is unquestionably a sullen faint expression of Christian triumph from that quarter, but, with the approaching discomfiture of the provincial armies, Paris has absolutely nothing left to hope for, even from a steadfast resistance to the hostile cannonade.

The San Francisco Bulletin comments upon an article which we published recently upon the prevalence of crime in California. Our contemporary says:

"Life is far safer in San Francisco than in New-York, and whatever corruption [illegible] here, it is less to crush [illegible] as in New-York, and they are frankly confessed and lectured by home critics. If they are infantile disorders, how desperately chronic must be the sins of Gotham in its age."

We give in at once, and beg our contemporary to say no more about it. He is right and we were wrong.

The war has been full of dramatic incidents, and the proclamation of WILLIAM of Prussia as Emperor of Germany, in the Hall of Mirrors at Versailles, is not the least striking of them. Kaiser WILHELM has little need to regard the ominous memories of the place, else he might have recalled the incident of MARIE ANTOINETTE in an adjoining mirror-lined chamber, having grasped her neck in affright at the reflection she saw of her body deprived of her head. One thing is certain—the culmination of German unity and success that was yesterday celebrated in the palace of LOUIS XIV will be one more perpetual source of bitterness to the Frenchmen who think of Versailles, and will give a new shade of meaning to LOUIS PHILIPPE'S inscription over the picture-gallery, "To all the glories of France."

It is to be presumed that the fact is becoming tolerably apparent, even to Tammany politicians, that the Federal census of New-York compiled last Summer is substantially correct. Unfortunately for the theory of its assailants, it will be seen by the completed returns of four Wards which we publish today that out of a total of 233,229, there has been found by the enumerators a decrease of 5,553. It would be interesting to know how much of this decrease has been due to the removal elsewhere of the laborers attracted before the November election by the good pay and no work of the public enterprises of Tammany.

The Committee called to try Dr. LANAHAN has reinstated him, and referred all questions in dispute to a subcommittee, which is to report to the General Conference in 1872. What will the Christian Advocate say to that? The public will probably think that the Investigating Committee has acted very wisely. It consisted of men too honest to be made the medium of "hushing up" a grave scandal. A full and thorough inquiry into the affairs of the Methodist Book Concern ought now to be made, and Dr. LANAHAN'S avowed enemies treated with the suspicion which their tactics have deservedly brought upon them.

Even a Power so little likely to be affected by a change in the European equilibrium as Sweden, is proceeding, according to a cable dispatch, to reorganize her army. This leaves hardly a single nation in Europe that has not greatly increased its war expenditure on account of the recent display of the military strength of Germany. A Frenchman so free from prejudice as M. MICHEL CHEVALIER has lately been using this argument; to show that England will find her inaction during the present war to have been very costly. She must hereafter, he asserts, "maintain permanently at home 350,000 to 400,000 trained soldiers." "She must throw up new fortifications around her arsenals; have intrenched camps and impregnable forts to protect her capital, and must remodel her fleet." There is no question that should Germany elect to take up the rôle of France as an aggressive Power, she would cost every country in Europe many millions annually in increased warlike expenditure; but the world generally does not expect Germany to do anything of the kind, and here rests her great opportunity and the true test of her place in civilization.

A course of lectures has been commenced at the New-York University Law School, and last night Mayor HALL delivered the first of the series. It was a very interesting paper, containing a good deal of information, and some excellent advice to law students. If we cannot praise the Mayor very often as a politician, the principles he lays down as a lawyer are entitled to our commendation. The Mayor's literary gifts enabled him to present his lecture in an attractive form, and if all the lectures of the course prove to be as good as the first, the students who listen to them cannot fail to derive profit and instruction. It is to be hoped that the Mayor's lecture will be presented to the public in a complete form.

The income tax seems doomed. The movement in the House for its immediate abolition has derived strength from the statements of the new Commissioner of Internal Revenue. And now the Senate follows with a two-thirds vote making the consideration of a bill terminating the tax the special order for Tuesday next. That vote does not absolutely determine the question of repeal, but it indicates a decided change of opinion where hostility to reduction of taxation has been strongest. Mr. KELLEY, we trust, will not allow the subject to sleep in the House. The income tax, always odious, has become unendurable. Public opinion is united on nothing more earnestly than in the demand for its repeal.

The New-Hampshire Election—The Nominations Complete.

The nominations of the Republican and Democratic parties for State officers and Congressmen in New-Hampshire are now complete, and are as follows:

	Republican.	Democratic.
Governor	James Pike.	Jas. A. Weston.
Railroad Com'r	D. W. Buckminster.	D. Gilchrist.
Congress.
First District	Wm. B. Small.	E. A. Hibbard.
Second District	Aaron F. Stevens.	Sam'l N. Bell.
Third District	Simon G. Griffin.	H. W. Parker.

There is a labor reform ticket in the field, and also a temperance ticket nominated by a very few bolters from the Temperance Convention. The Republican ticket was indorsed by the larger portion of the Temperance Convention. The Labor Reform nominations are: For Governor, L. P. COOPER; Railroad Commissioner, O. ROBERTS; Congressmen—First District, BENJAMIN A. HIBBARD, the Democratic candidate; Second District, WM. H. GROVE; Third District, E. D. BAKER. The election occurs on the second Tuesday in March. The vote for State officers last year was divided as follows: Republican, 37,737; Democratic, 28,604; Republican majority, 9,133. The vote for Congressmen in the several districts in 1869 was as follows: First District—Republican, 13,136; Democratic, 11,738; Republican majority, 1,762. Second District—Republican, 11,513; Democratic, 9,866; Republican majority, 1,647. Third District—Republican, 13,032; Democratic, 10,691; Republican majority, 2,341. Gen. AARON F. STEVENS, the present Democratic member from the Second District, is the only Republican renominated. The Democrats have a new candidate in that district, by the assertion of which they run the candidates who were defeated two years ago.

ALBANY.

Democratic Buncombe—The Pioneer Underground—Westchester Annexation—Another Blow at Erie—Incorporating Cities by General Law—Smashing a Ring, &c.

From Our Own Correspondent.

ALBANY, Friday, Jan. 20, 1871.

The Republicans in the Senate tested the sincerity of the Democrats in their professed desire for an early adjournment of the Legislature by voting in a body, this evening, against the proposition of a Democrat to adjourn from today over till Monday morning. Every Democrat except LORD voted for the adjournment, and it was carried, thus showing the pretense of the Democracy to be a sham designed to secure a little political capital.

THE ORIGINAL JACOBS.

Mr. GENET added another to the multitudinous schemes for steam communication in New-York by introducing the bill of the Manhattan Railroad Company for a tunnel road under Broadway to Twenty-sixth-street, thence under Madison-avenue to the Harlem Flats, and thence above ground to and across Harlem River. This is the first bill ever introduced to the Legislature for an under-ground railroad in New-York City, and therefore deserves the title of the "Original Jacobs." It passed both Houses in 1865 and was vetoed on very trivial grounds by Gov. FENTON. It has been before every Legislature since, though it has not been very urgently pushed. It claims to have a sort of pre-emption right to the route under Broadway, which is, doubtless, the only feasible route for an under-ground railway through the City. Mr. HAND, who represents the Company here, says they are perfectly willing to abide by the suggestion of Mayor HALL to grant charters to all the rival companies, and allow the one which first shows a paid-up capital to build its road.

THE WESTCHESTER ANNEXATION.

Senator GENET presented another batch of petitions from citizens of Westchester County in favor of annexation to New-York. There is an evident design on the part of a clique of members and outsiders to push this job, but TWEED still insists that he is opposed to it, and, if so, it can't succeed in this Legislature.

ANOTHER SHOT AT ERIE.

Mr. GOODRICH introduced a bill authorizing the Supreme Court to sue out a writ of mandamus compelling any corporation to permit a stockholder to make an entry of the transfer of shares in the transfer books, and to register such transfer in the stock ledger of such corporation, and to issue certificates of shares so transferred—the writ to be sued out on the relation of any person legally or equitably entitled to such transfer. GOODRICH will go before the Railroad Committee next Wednesday, and ask them to do fix a day for a hearing on the bill to repeal the Director's act. Unless they report the bill in a reasonable time, a resolution will be offered to take it out of their hands, and refer it to the Committee of the Whole.

GENERAL CITY INCORPORATION LAW.

Mr. PRINCE, of Queens, offered a resolution, which was adopted, instructing the Judiciary Committee to report for the consideration of the Assembly a general law for the incorporation of cities. More than four hundred pages of the Session Laws of 1870 are filled with special acts for the incorporation of municipalities, and it is proposed to have a general law for the purpose, like that for the incorporation of villages.

THE RAILROAD COMMITTEE SNUBBED.

Nearly the entire session of the Assembly today was consumed in a fight over the bill, mentioned in my dispatch of Wednesday, to repeal the act of 1869, authorizing the Plattsburg and Whitehall Railroad Company to establish a steam ferry across Lake Champlain, to give the people of Essex County railroad egress to New-York and Boston by way of Vermont. Mr. BUCK, of New-York, opened the ball by offering a resolution that the aforesaid bill be taken out of the hands of the Railroad Committee, where it was referred on Wednesday, and refer it to the Committee on Commerce and Navigation. DELANO, of Essex, advocated the transfer at considerable length, and was followed by Messrs. SELKREG, BUCK, and others, in its favor, and by SMITH, WEED, ALVORD, and others against. Mr. SELKREG said that WEED, who introduced the repeal bill was the author of the original bill granting the right to establish the ferry, and strenuously urged its passage two years ago as a member of the "Third House." The remarkable change in his views was explained by DELANO, who charged him with having private interests to be served by the repeal, besides a desire to avenge himself for being left out in the last election for directors of the Plattsburg and Whitehall Railroad. After several ineffectual attempts to amend BUCK's resolution, or lay it on the table, it was adopted, as introduced, by a vote of 61 to 45. The fight was partly against the Railroad Committee, which is not popular among the members, and partly against the "Ring," which I have before alluded to as having been formed at the commencement of the session between leading members of both parties, who imagined they could draw the rank and file in their train, and thus carry all their schemes with a rush. This was their first pitched-battle, and they have suffered a signal defeat. Both the Ring and the Railroad Committee are considered "smashed," and will require reconstruction.

THE TAX LEVY.

SWEENEY's bill to transfer the New-York tax levy to the control of the Tammany Ring excites a good deal of discussion here. The Republican members generally express a willingness to see the tax levy, which has been a source of corruption and fraud for years, taken out of the Legislature, but they are not willing that it should go under the control of such men as TWEED, SWEENY, CONNOLLY and HALL, and be made to supply a political fund for Tammany Hall. The money power of that corrupt clique already controls the State, and with what they could steal from the New-York tax levies, they would be able to carry out their design of getting possession of the National Treasury. Republican members from the country say they would like to see some public expressions of the sentiments of the people of New-York with regard to the bill. TWEED intimates that it is not his scheme, and it is a matter of indifference to him whether it passes or not. S.

By Mr. ALVORD—Calling on the State Engineer and Surveyor for a statement in regard to railroads failing to report in accordance with the law. Tabled on his motion.

THE TICONDEROGA RAILROAD FERRY.

Mr. BUCK moved that the Railroad Committee be discharged from the further consideration of the bill relative to the Plattsburg and Whitehall steam ferry at Ticonderoga, and that it be referred to the Committee on Commerce and Navigation.

Mr. ALVORD moved, as an amendment, that the Railroad Committee be instructed to report within eight days. A long debate sprung up, in which the importance of railroad connections between the northern part of the State and New-England was discussed.

Mr. WEED moved to lay the matter on the table till further information on the subject could be obtained. Lost.

Mr. WEED explained that the bill referred to simply repealed an act authorizing this railroad company to charge additional fare, and he could not see any reason for referring such a bill to the Committee on Commerce and Navigation.

Mr. ALVORD withdrew his motion, and moved that the bill be referred to the Committee of the Whole.

Mr. DELANO was opposed to this motion, for the reason that his constituents wished to be heard.

Mr. ALVORD's motion was lost. The question was then on transferring the matter to the Committee on Commerce and Navigation, which was carried. The House then adjourned till Monday evening at 7½ o'clock.

AMUSEMENTS.

The Holland Testimonial.

ACADEMY OF MUSIC TODAY.

What may be called the second act of the drama of the Holland Testimonial takes place today at the Academy of Music. Two performances are given, one in the morning, the other in the evening. Our advertising columns show the extraordinary character and variety of the entertainments offered. We have not the least doubt that these affairs will turn out as prosperously as those of Thursday. There are a great number of persons who have intended to do something for the Holland Testimonial and who have held themselves in reserve for the demonstration at the Academy. The matinée of this occasion will be very much in the hands of the ladies. It presents in a considerable degree a musical programme, and should bring out the fashionable element in strong force. We are credibly assured that a numerous delegation will attend from the congregation of the "little church round the corner." Let the public come forward liberally today as well, and fill the spacious Academy from parquet to dome. They may depend that every dollar realized by the testimonial will be put to a good use. Its disposition by the Committee will be fully announced, and it is hoped that it will be a wise one. But, apart from its charitable object, the performance of today and tonight are in themselves truly remarkable. Readers will agree with this statement when they read the details enumerated elsewhere. Let each and all of them resolve to do something, if only to buy a single ticket, for this noble object. It will be an act on which no one will ever look back with regret.

Miscellaneous.

MRS. CARTER'S READINGS.

Mrs. FRANCES M. CARTER recited a number of selections from the poets, at Delmonico's Hall, last evening. An exceedingly fashionable audience filled the place, and expressed much satisfaction with Mrs. CARTER's efforts. The lady has often acted in presence of the brilliant assemblages gathered some years since at Jerome's Theatre, and she has since read and recited with success in California and elsewhere. She has an appreciation of the spirit of her text very few readers can boast of, an expressive face, and perfect ease in carriage and gesture. She is not so fortunate in respect of a voice, as in talent, but the animation and force of her delivery make amends for the harshness and small compass of her voice. Mrs. CARTER was heartily applauded last evening, and there can be little doubt that a public hearing of the lady will call forth similar tokens of gratification. The principal pieces on the programme were SCHILLER's "The Diver," Mrs. BROWNING's "Mother and Poet," Mrs. STEVENS' "The Polish Boy," and HOFFIN's "Charlie Machree."

MME. SEEBACH'S BENEFIT.

Mme. SEEBACH will have a benefit at the Stadt Theatre this evening. She will appear as Griseldis, in HALM's celebrated tragedy of that name. Mlle. VENETA personates the Queen. The character is one of the strongest in Mme. SEEBACH's repertory, and she achieved great triumphs in it in Europe. Notwithstanding the fact that Mme. SEEBACH has her own benefit this evening, she has, in the kindest manner, volunteered the aid of her talents for the Holland Testimonial, this afternoon.

BRIEF MENTION.

There will be matinées at all the theatres today. At Wallack's "Used Up" and "Faint Heart" will be acted....Miss KREBS' second piano-forte recital will take place at Steinway Hall today....Mr. MARK SMITH returned from Europe by the Cuba yesterday.

A New Statue.

American sculptors are fast attaining to high distinction. A large proportion of them achieve European reputation. From Florence, the home of POWERS and a favorite haunt of many artists, comes word of a new and exceedingly beautiful work by T. R. GOULD, a young sculptor sent out to execute a statue of the late Gov. ANDREW, for the State of Massachusetts. The main purpose of his visit will probably be eclipsed, so far as reputation goes, by the fame of this work of fancy, which the Florence journals and the correspondents of several English papers praise without stint. It is called "The West Wind," and represents a vigorous and graceful young female figure, erect, listening, just ready for flight, with hair and drapery floating in the air, the whole effect of attitude, face and figure being free and strong, yet most delicate. The conception of the work is lauded for originality, and the treatment for great skill and ingenuity. The statue is stated to have been bought by an American gentleman for his own house.

The Seven Republican Senators Who Voted Against Impeachment.

From the Chicago Tribune, Jan. 18.

The unanimous nomination of Hon. JOHN B. HENDERSON as United States Senator, in place of Mr. DRAKE, by the Republicans in the Missouri Legislature, is a tardy but nevertheless ample acknowledgment of the injustice heaped upon him for his vote against impeachment. Mr. HENDERSON was one of the "seven traitors" who were howled at from Dan to Beersheba, because they had the courage and independence to vote according to their convictions, upon the trial of ANDREW JOHNSON. Senator ROSS, of Kansas, is another of these, and, if he is not re-elected, it will not be because anybody now supposes that he was bribed. This charge was brought against both HENDERSON and ROSS, but particularly against the latter, because he was supposed to be the least able to defend himself. Time has rolled on, and we now find Senator HENDERSON receiving the support of every member of his party in the Missouri Legislature, while nobody in Kansas is so shameless as to repeat, or so credulous as to believe, that Mr. ROSS received money or any other valuable consideration for his vote. Mr. TRUMBULL is by far the strongest man we have in the regard and estimation of the people of Illinois, and we are assured by the best observers that Ex-Senator GRIMES would be re-elected to any office which he might seek from those of Iowa, as against any other of her public men.

Slavery in New-York—A Reminiscence.

ISAAC KETCHAM, Esq., the oldest inhabitant of the town of Mount Hope, died at his residence, near the village, on Sunday last, in the ninety-first year of his age. Alluding to him, the Goshen Republican says:

"Mr. KETCHAM was unusually robust in his general physical condition, but he had been troubled with a cancer in the head for nearly twenty-five years, and this finally destroyed him. He lived with his son JOSEPH, and was widely respected by his fellow-townsmen as an excellent citizen. We remember having heard him give his experience as to the profit and inducement in owning slaves in this State in his earlier years, before the institution of slavery was abolished, and it is of interest enough to publish. Mr. KETCHAM said he paid $900 for a negro, TOM, by name, and found that, although TOM was a first-class hand, the interest on his investment would, in those days, pay the wages of a first-class white laborer for more days than TOM could put in in a year, and in the end the white man would perform nearly double the slave would. Said Mr. KETCHAM, "when I saw I had TOM to care for for life, in sickness and health, work or play, and that others were realizing that in the North slaves had become unprofitable, so that the market was not open for a profitable sale, I felt that the law abolishing slavery, really freed me from TOM, rather than him from me."

VENEZUELA.

Revolt of Prisoners at San Carlos—Capitulation of the Fort—Fighting in the Streets of the City—Final Capture of the Place—Danger of Foreign Vessels—Guzman Blanco now President.

CARACAS, Sunday, Dec. 25, 1870.

The fort of San Carlos, which is twenty miles from the City of Maracaibo, was captured by PULGAR'S troops, under Gen. ELEAZAR URDAMATA, on the 3d of December. But two days before that, the prisoners of the fort revolted. The doors being opened for them by the Sergeant of the Guard, they made a rush for the commandant's quarters; he seeing that he could not defend the fort, attempted to blow up the magazine, but was instantly shot, and seriously, wounded. He was afterward cut down with a sabre and at length died of his wounds. After a few hours' fighting the fort remained in the hands of the prisoners, who declared for BLANCO, and in two days PULGAR'S troops appeared and took possession of the fort in the name of GUZMAN BLANCO.

ATTACK ON THE TOWN.

After the taking of the fort some lively skirmishing took place between it and the town. At midnight of the 5th PULGAR'S troops advanced on the place, and severe fighting then took place in the streets, the people firing from church and house windows and from house-tops. The fighting lasted several hours, and at length PULGAR was forced to retire. The attack, however, was renewed on the 6th. The battle again raged in the streets, but the firing was very irregular, although the defense was vigorous. After nearly half a day's fighting PULGAR'S troops were successful, and the city capitulated. In the evening PULGAR entered in person, and at once levied upon the citizens and merchants for money.

NEUTRAL VESSELS INJURED.

Two vessels which were in the harbor of Maracaibo during the battle, the American schooner J. M. Morales and the British schooner Adelaide, were much exposed, and shot and shell flew thick about them. The Adelaide was considerably damaged in her rigging. A boat's crew from Maracaibo left the town, and, running alongside the Morales, fired a heavy volley across her decks.

THE VANQUISHED EXILED.

All the officers of HERNANDEZ'S troops, and men taken prisoners, were at once exiled to Curacoa, but the prisoners of San Carlos, as well as from all the other prisons, were liberated by GUZMAN. The orderly conduct of PULGAR'S troops after the taking of the city, so opposite to the general behavior of Venezuelan soldiers, was a surprise to the people.

The New Venezuelan President.

GUZMAN BLANCO, who is now the actual President of the Republic of Venezuela, is the son of ANTONIO LERCADO GUZMAN, who was the prime mover and leading spirit in the opposition to the Provisional Governor, SOUBLETTE, in 1846, and who, with three others, was, in consequence, having failed in his movements, condemned to death by SOUBLETTE late in the same year. The following year, 1847, MONAGAS obtained the Presidency and commuted the death sentence to perpetual exile, but after a year's absence he was allowed to return. GUZMAN BLANCO is now about forty years of age. He commenced his public career in 1859, joining TOBAR in his revolt against President CASTRO. From 1859 to 1860, he was in the mountains in command of a band of guerrillas, and carried on a vigorous warfare. At that time there were three contestants for the office of President, CASTRO, who held the office, TOBAR and GUAL competitors. The revolution, which was carried on with varied success, terminated unsuccessfully for each of them, and PAEZ came into power. He was opposed by FALCON, whose cause GUZMAN BLANCO espoused, and was by him made General. He personally made the treaty with PAEZ by which the latter surrendered himself and gave up the City of Caracas, which closed the revolution. GUZMAN BLANCO then went to Europe and negotiated a loan of £1,500,000 sterling. This money, however, has never been accounted for, nor has the principal or interest ever been paid. It was divided between FALCON, GUZMAN and his officers. The parties in England who loaned the money made application to the British Government to enforce their claims, but they refused to interfere, on the ground that it was a private matter; it futher stated that any parties who loaned money to any of the South American Republics was to do so at their own risk. In the year 1862, on GUZMAN'S return from Europe, he received office under FALCON, and for several years was engaged as Minister for Venezuela at different Courts in Europe, or as acting President at Caracas in the absence of FALCON, who spent much of his time on his plantation at Coro.

In 1868, MONAGAS headed a revolution against FALCON, whom he succeeded in defeating and condemned to perpetual banishment, but GUZMAN BLANCO was allowed to remain at Curacas in the full enjoyments of the rights of citizenship. He continued there until late in the year 1869, taking no active part in public affairs, but then he left for Curacoa for the purpose of organizing a revolution against MONAGAS. While there he dispatched arms and ammunition to Venezuela for the use of the revolutionists, and the factscoming to the knowledge of the Government, they demanded of the Dutch Governor of Curacoa that GUZMAN be compelled to leave the island, in accordance with the terms of the treaty then existing between the two countries. This was accordingly done, but GUZMAN gave the Colonial Government much trouble before he left, and not until the matter had been referred to the King of Holland, who forwarded peremptory orders that GUZMAN be immediately expelled, did he depart. After his expulsion he proceeded at once to Venezuela and landed on the coast of Coro, where he placed himself at the head of the revolutionists, issuing a proclamation, in which he propounded the doctrine that if the people were dissatisfied with the Government, they had every right to protest, and, if necessary, to resist by arms.

The revolution was then actively commenced, and success generally attended the revolutionists. BLANCO succeeded in obtaining Caracas in May, 1870, after which Porto Cabello, Laguyara, and other inferior places fell into his hands. He at length took the fort of San Carlos, at Maracaibo, and with it the Venezuelan fleet, and recently succeeded in taking possession of the town of Maracaibo itself, which virtually closed the revolution, with the exception of some small bodies of troops which are scattered in the mountainous regions, and GUZMAN may now be considered the President of the Republic.

GUZMAN is a man of good physique, of great firmness and determination, but very irritable and extremely dominant in character.

OBITUARY.

John Hagadorn.

JOHN HAGADORN, a well-known and highly-respected citizen, and for the last thirty years a resident of the Seventh Ward, died at his residence in Madison-street, yesterday morning. Born at Rhinebeck, Dutchess County, in 1788, he came to this City when fourteen years of age. On reaching manhood, he engaged in mercantile pursuits, and later in life became the agent of the Lorillard estate, after the division of which, trusts of a kindred nature occupied his active attention up to the close of his life. In all his dealings his honesty and sterling integrity of character were proverbial, and the industry and prudence of many years was rewarded by a moderate competency. A volunteer in the artillery service of the war of 1812, his regiment was stationed in one of the numerous earthworks which were erected at that time for the defense of the City from the threatened landing of the English. Marrying early in life, he reared and educated a large family of children, eleven living to manhood and womanhood, one of whom, Capt. HAGADORN, of the First New-York Volunteers, served with honor during the late war, and was severely wounded at the second battle of Bull Run. A consistent member of the Forsyth-street Methodist Episcopal Church for upward of forty years, yet of such a modest, retiring disposition, that he repeatedly declined official distinction therein. His personal recollection of the City, as it was fifty years and upward ago, were very interesting. His death will be sincerely regretted by all who knew him.

A CONVERTED CRIMINAL.

Pardon of Edward Norton—The Most Noted Criminal in New-Jersey—The Terror of Trenton—Thirty Years in State Prison.

EDWARD NORTON, the most noted criminal in the State of New-Jersey, and whose name was for years the terror of Trenton and the surrounding country, has just been pardoned on the expiration of half the term for which he was sentenced. NORTON has been the principal object of interest to persons visiting the State Prison. At twenty, he was the most noted and hardened criminal in the State of New-Jersey. At twenty-four he was found guilty by fourteen juries on as many indictments, without a single recommendation to mercy, and the extent of his sentence, had it been given, would have been imprisonment for 130 years, and fines amounting to over $12,000. Such was the character of this man in 1855. In October last the Court of Pardons gave him a full pardon, under the impression that he was an entirely reformed man, and that the ends of justice would not be met by keeping him longer in confinement. The Court, at the time of his trial, dealt leniently with him, and, though he was only sentenced to thirty years' imprisonment and a fine of $2, on hearing his sentence he arose to his feet and brought down such imprecations upon his Judge as made every person in the crowded Court-room shudder. This was in January, of 1856. For five years this man was the terror of his keepers, as he had been of the citizens. Nothing was too daring for him to attempt, nothing too difficult for him to accomplish. Scarcely had he been confined when he succeeded in escaping from his cell, and, seizing a large knife, forced an entrance into the front corridor, where he barricaded himself and prepeard to fight his way out. So great was the fear of him felt by the authorities that, without any attempt to recapture him, he was deliberately shot down by a deputy keeper, who armed a rifle through the iron bars dividing the corridors. He was then placed in close confinement, a ball and chain were attached to his legs and he was closely guarded. Yet he twice escaped, and, returning to his old haunts, spread fear through the city. For five years he was chained down and guarded.

Ten years ago this man, whose sentences had been for burglary, arson and highway robbery, pretended to come under the influences of religion, and whether his motives in changing were good or not, the change has been a genuine one. His conduct won for him the confidence of his keepers, and all the liberties of the prison were given him. His career and known daring gave him authority with the other prisoners. In 1868 a portion of the prison was burned, and in the confusion the doors were thrown open and the prisoners thronged into the yards, an attack was organized, the prisoners agreeing to force an escape let the consequences be what they might. At this juncture only the presence and authority of this man NORTON saved a terrible massacre. The prisoners were armed with implements from the shops, and the 500 daring, determined men could easily have murdered the handful of men opposed to them had it not been for the superior daring and determination of this one man. This probably secured him his pardon. From that time his position has been almost that of a deputy keeper. In October last the Court of Pardons granted him pardon upon the expiration of half his sentence, which took place on the 16th of this month. During the last ten years all the money he has been able to earn, working over-hours, amounting to several hundred dollars, has been given to the support of an aged mother whom his disgrace had nearly killed. The first thing NORTON did after being freed, was to walk up State-street to the house of Chief-Justice GREEN who had passed sentence upon him and upon whom he had called down such terrible curses. He requested to see the Judge, and, on being admitted, begged his pardon, and stated his intention of living a thoroughly reformed life. The Judge cordially greeted him.

There is little doubt but that NORTON, who is not yet forty years of age, is reformed. The influence of the prison authorities was used to secure his freedom, and scarcely a citizen of Trenton that is not glad of his release. It is his intention to enter into business in another State.

HEAVY BURGLARIES.

A Furnishing-Store Emptied—A Jewelry Establishment Rifled.

The burglars of the City are just now exceptionally active and successful in their depredations. They seem to enter houses at pleasure, and carry away whatever may suit them. Yesterday morning it was discovered that the extensive furnishing-store of ROBERT MORTON, at the corner of Sixth-avenue and Twenty-third-street, had been entered during the night and rifled of goods valued at $15,000. The burglars had entered by prying off the lock of the basement door, but as soon as they had entered confederates placed a new lock on the door, so that the policeman in passing would not discover that it had been tampered with. Those inside then cut a hole through the floor behind the counter, which communicated with the outside cellar, through which all the goods in basement, from whence they were taken to the street with the assistance of the outside associates. Singularly enough, they got away with the immense plunder without being seen, so that there is no clue to either thieves or property.

When reaching his office yesterday morning, on the fifth floor of No. 150 Fulton-street, Mr. KUHN, of the firm of KUHN & DORFLINGER, manufacturers of jewelry, discovered that the premises had been entered during the night, the two large safes completely demolished, and the entire stock of the firm, consisting of ear-rings, breast-pins, and all other kinds of gold ornaments, valued at $10,000, carried away. The appearance of the safes showed that expert burglars, furnished with the most approved implements of their nefarious trade, had been at work. The safes had been burst by powder, and it was evident that gunpowder had not been used. Both of these great crimes have been reported to Superintendent KELSO, and expert detectives have been detailed to work them up.

The Working Men's Union—Parliamentary Differences of Opinion.

The regular semi-monthly meeting of the Working Men's Union was held, last night, at No. 327 Bowery, Mr. PETER DALY, Vice-President, in the chair. The Journeymen Printer's Co-operative Association having sent in delegates, several other delegates protested against their being allowed seats. The President declared them eligible, and the usual routine of business was proceeded with. Credentials of delegates were received, referred, and being found correct, the delegates were admitted to seats. Three trustees were then elected, namely, Messrs. INNESS, SUTCLIFFE and FERGUSON. The reports of the treasurer and financial secretary were read, but being incomplete further time was granted to complete them. A motion was made and carried to send a delegate to the State Trades' Assembly. While the vote for a delegate was being taken, several members appealed from the decision of the chair in allowing delegates from the Journeymen Printers Co-operative Association to vote under the protest, on the vote being taken the decision of the chair was approved by a vote of 25 to 21.

The election for a delegate to the State Trade Assembly was then gone on with, and ended in Mr. WM. J. JESSUP being declared the successful candidate. It was then moved that his election be declared unanimous. Mr. JESSUP objected, and the Chair refused to entertain the motion, whereupon a Mr. FERGUSON appealed, but, on a vote, the Chair was sustained. The settlement of the pic-nic business was then discussed, and some other business of minor importance transacted, after which the meeting adjourned.

A New Way of Smuggling Diamonds—Important Arrest by Col. Whitley.

Some days since Col. WHITLEY, Chief of the Secret Service, received information that one J. B. BLACKMAN, an importer of diamonds in Broadway, near Maiden-lane, had succeeded in smuggling into the country precious stones to the value of $30,000, which he was said to have kept from the prying eyes of the Custom-house officials by concealing them in false calves attached to his legs. His information being sufficiently precise to warrant an arrest, Col. WHITLEY, yesterday, visited the office of BLACKMAN as a diamond merchant from the West, and the unsuspecting dealer immediately walked into the trap by displaying his wares, which he said he could afford to sell cheap, as they had not passed through the Custom-house. Col. WHITLEY then arrested him, and recovered about one-third of the smuggled diamonds, which vary from one-half carat to one and three-quarter carats each, and are worth from $50 to $400 each. The prisoner was taken to Ludlow-street Jail, where he was locked up to await arraignment this morning before a United States Commissioner.

Terrible and Remarkable Suicide.

PATRICK KELLY, aged sixty-five years, a currier by trade, committed suicide, at 2½ o'clock yesterday morning. He had been long suffering with neuralgia, and being worse on Thursday, remained in bed all day, but at night, while his wife was sleeping, he clothed himself, and proceeded toward the Delaware and Lackawana Railroad at High-street. As the freight-train passed, hardly moving, he crawled through under the cars, and turning, put his head immediately under a wheel and lay still, while the cars passed over his neck. The brakeman on the train corroborated the story of the affair as above related, and several physicians testified that they had previously considered the man deranged and had advised his being sent to an insane asylum. The County physician granted a burial certificate, and the body was taken in charge by his family.

THE GRANT CLUBS.

New Organization in the Sixteenth Assembly District.

The Republicans of the Sixteenth Assembly District met last evening at No. 131 Third-avenue, and organized a Grant Club. Capt. CREGAN addressed the meeting at some length. According to his statements the Republican Party of this City is sadly in need of a reorganization. The Republicans of the Sixteenth District, he said, were determined to weed out the men who for years have disgraced the party in the district. The following officers were then unanimously elected:

President, Gen. WM. H. LAWRENCE; Vice-Presidents, Frank E. Howe, Isaac H. Bailey, Wm. Laimbeer, Treasurer M. Cregan; Secretaries, A. S. Bugbee, Andrew Wilson, Wm. Tobin; Delegates to the General Committee, John Lobdell, Wm. S. O'Brien, Wm. H. Hall, John Noa, Philip Reilly, Chas. E. Brohm, John Hamilton, James M. Thomson, Jr., M. Cregan, James H. Little, Frank E. Howe, Isaac H. Bailey, Wm. Laimbeer; also an Executive Committee of sixty.

Resolutions were passed sustaining the Administration of Gen. GRANT, after which the meeting adjourned subject to the call of the Chair.

New Organization in the Second Assembly District.

The Republicans of the Second Assembly District met last evening at No. 181 Chatham-street, and formed a Grant Club. The meeting was an enthusiastic one, and elected the following officers:

President, P. MACK; Vice-Presidents, Owen O'Connell, Joseph Flood; Secretaries, W. F. Postern, Michael Costello; Treasurer, H. G. Leask; Delegates to Central Club, Dennis Shea, Morris Friedjam, John McCue, H. G. Leask, John Sullivan, Pierre C. Van Wyck, Theodore C. Williams, Joseph Flood, Mathew Stewart, Thomas H. Martin.

A New Grant Club in the Twenty-first Assembly District—Gen. Grant, Collector Murphy and the Released Fenians.

At a meeting of the Twenty-first Assembly District Woodford and Kaufman Club, last evening, resolutions were unanimously adopted indorsing the action of President GRANT in relation to the San Domingo Commission, and to his appointment in the Commission of gentlemen of high character. The meeting indorsed the acts of the Administration of President GRANT, and also the action of Collector MURPHY in endeavoring to reconcile the differences in the Republican Party in this City, and to defeat the schemes of Tammany intriguers. A hope was expressed that the State Central Committee would adopt measures to secure unity of action among the Republicans of New-York. The following resolutions in reference to the released Fenians, offered by Mr. WILLIS, was adopted by a small majority:

Resolved, That we welcome to our hospitable shores the Fenian prisoners recently released from British dungeons, recognizing them as martyrs in the cause of universal liberty.

The meeting then adjourned, but was called to order again by a motion from Mr. FROST, who moved the formation of a Grant Club.

Col. A. P. KETCHUM arose and stated that he considered the motion as an insult to himself, inasmuch as he was the President of a Grant Club already organized in that district. He characterized the movers as disorganizers, having for their purpose personal gain.

A number of speeches were made and for a time the debate became very personal, but the motion finally prevailed and a committee of five was appointed on organization.

Sixth Assembly District Grant Club.

A meeting of the Sixth Assembly District Grant Club was held last evening, HENRY A. SMITH, President, in the chair. The following resolutions were unanimously adopted:

Resolved, That the Sixth Assembly District Grant Club do hereby pledge themselves, as far as possible, to advocate and advance the interest of the Republican Party in this district, and it will use every effort to defeat the fraudulent majority of the party now in power in this City and State.

Resolved, That the Administration of Gen. GRANT meets with our hearty approval, and we are satisfied that the eminent soldier and statesman fully meets the expectations of the patriotic masses who placed him in the Presidential chair.

Resolved, That we hereby proclaim him to be our standard-bearer for the coming contest in 1872, and we pledge ourselves to labor until success shall crown our efforts, and he shall be triumphantly elected President.

Resolved, That we approve of and recommend to the State Central Committee a reorganization of the Republican Party of this City.

The following gentlemen were elected delegates to the Central Grant Club: Henry A. Smith, Eneas Elliott, Daniel P. Crowley, James O. Ellery, Wm. C. Coles, David P. Smith, Wm. O. Hara, Charles W. Little, Jas. H. Anderson, John Simpson.

Seventh Assembly District Grant Club.

An adjourned meeting of this new Club was held last evening at Nos. 93 and 95 Sixth-avenue, for the purpose of more complete organization. Mr. JOHN D. LAWSON, on taking the chair, explained the objects of the Club to be to sustain the present Administration by rallying as a permanent body to renominate President GRANT in 1872. He asserted that the great majority of the Republicans in the Seventh Assembly District were strong supporters of the President, and the Club would be very large and influential if proper care was taken to ascertain the political status of each applicant for admission. The following Committees were appointed by the Chair: On Membership—Messrs. C. Van Gott, Wm. Morgan and Wm. Turbush. Rooms—Messrs. J. A. Richmond, Alfred Classen and Hoff, ex officiis—Messrs. A. J. H. Duganne, F. A. Conkling, and G. W. Blagden. The Club then adjourned to the second Friday in February.

The Mute Murderer—Trial in Ulster County—The Jury Unable to Agree.

The trial of the negro deaf mute, LEVI BODINE, in Ulster County, for the murder of DANIEL HASBROUCK, has ended in the jury not being able to agree to a verdict. The Poughkeepsie Eagle of the 19th inst., says: "The case was given to the jury at 4 o'clock P. M. At 6 o'clock they came into Court and reported that they could not agree. The Judge ordered them to go back to their room, and deliberate further, and the Court would meet at 10 P. M., to hear their verdict. A recess was then taken to that hour. When the Court met at 10 P. M., the jury reported that they were still unable to agree. The Judge sent them out again. At 11 P. M. they came in again, and reported that they could not agree, and that one of their number was sick. The Judge then discharged them."

COMMENTS ON THE WAR.

Scenes in France—A New-Year's Eve Service for the Germans.

Margency (Jan. 2) Correspondence of London Daily News.

On New Year's Eve we had not, indeed, a "midnight meeting," but I was present at a very interesting religious service by candle-light. The scene was the fine old church of Chelles, one of the most venerable religious edifices around Paris, with massive stone pillars, old Roman arches, much stained glass, carved oaken work, and Popish decoration generally. The service was for the whole of the Twenty-fourth Division (Saxons.) As we drove from Brou in the moonlight, we passed large groups hastening on to Chelles. It must be remembered that the service was an entirely voluntary one. There was no command laid upon the men that they should turn out of warm billets and walk four or five miles in one of the coldest nights of the year. Nevertheless, the old church. I venture to say, never had within its hoary walls so numerous a congregation. The officers whom I accompanied were unable to struggle their way up to the incl sure in front of the altar, and we were glad to find seats among the men by the side of one of the pillars. There was something indescribably affecting in the music. An harmonium close to the altar led; the strain was taken up by a military band in the balcony, and the 2,000 men present joined in with one accord. There was no discord, but the church was too small for the volume of sound; yet one would not have wished it more slender. Then the divisional chaplain, standing on the steps of the altar, not occupying the pulpit, delivered what was something between a sermon, an address, and a prayer. He had the natural gift of eloquence, his words came from the heart, and they went to the heart. As he spoke of the night this time last year, in the happy homes of Germany, and contrasted it with the quietude that now assuredly reigned in these households in so many of which there was a vacancy, right many were the bowed heads and the moist eyes. Then the speaker struck a new key. The war had, indeed, made a sombre New-Year in the fatherland, it came upon many a household desolated by its ravages "Aye, out there on those slopes across the river," he broke out with raised arm and flushed face, "there lie beneath the foreign sod many and many of our dear comrades and brethren, never to rise again till the last trumpet sounds. But, though each grave mound there is the sad emblem of so much misery, this New Year's Eve of broken home circles, of sorrowing parents, of weeping wives, of fatherless children, yet—" and here the man's voice broke down, and he stood with the arm of a sword in the hand's grasp—" yet we know our brothers died in a good cause. They fell für Könüg und Vaterland, and surely they are mit Gott. And the war, sad and solemn episode in our history as it is in one sense, has had yet another glorious result. It has made our German fatherland not a name, but a reality. Already one race, one people, we are no more a nation—Saxon, Prussian, Mecklenburger, Badener, Bavarian, we are all now children of the great German Empire." The speaker paused, and through the dead silence of the moment there came the faint boom of the cannon on the batteries in the front. The sound gave him a new cue. "Listen to the sound of the dear old cannon—a sound now as ever, heralding the victory to our arms. To that sound you like wise will return a better, a more united people. The future holds before you redress the future, but, oh! remember ever in its midst that speaks the tidings for you, 'Death is near; prepare to meet your God.' The good soldier is always ready when the battle-bugle sounds—he falls into the ranks with needle-gun and ammunition ready for action; but there is something else for which he must ever be ready, too—death, and then which follows death, his peace with God must ever be part, and the chief part for himself, of his battle equipment."

This will give you an idea of the strain in which was couched this most powerful and stirring address. When it had finished, the instrumental music did not at once commence, but the vocalists of the band, under the conductorship of an under-officer, struck up Luther's "New-Year's Hymn," the difficult part singing of which they accomplished with real beauty and feeling. Then another burst of instrumental and vocal music, that seemed to make the roof vibrate—the blessing—and the quiet dispersal of the great throng. As I walked to our carriage, we passed two and threes of the soldiery talking earnestly of the words they had heard. Yet let me be candid. Their tone was rather that of connoisseurs than of Christians. "It was very beautiful." "His words were like fire," "I could have listened to him ever so much longer," and so forth—that was the tone of the comments. It was, quoad the religious sentiment of the address, much the same tone in which men speak of an actor's performance, of a prima donna's singing, of a horse's galloping—not as if the matter were one of the deepest personal import to each one of them.

English Comments on Minister Washburne's Sketches of Events in Paris.

From the London Times, Jan. 8.

The dispatches of the United States Minister contain, for the information of the Government at Washington, some remarkable sketches of the course of events in Paris. The false reports that were so freely circulated by the Parisian Press and encouraged by the Palikao Ministry in the early part of August, excited popular movements in Paris, which Mr. WASHBURNE graphically describes. At this time it is a painful task to peruse an impartial record of the self-delusions in which the capital of France luxuriated while the enemy was advancing with rapid and triumphant strides to her gates. The wild exuberance of joy to which the people were roused by some Stock-Exchange story of a victory over the Prussians, or by some audacious legend of the death of the Crown Prince, invented by a sensation-mongering Journal, sadly illustrates the disposition to believe none but good news, which seems still to flourish unchecked by unvaried disaster. What theatrical mummeries Paris then allowed herself to perpetrate may be read in Mr. WASHBURNE'S dispatch of the 8th of August. It is curious, however, to observe how the mere name of a Republic fires the sympathies of an American. Mr. WASHBURNE can discern plainly enough the absurdities of which the Imperialist mob is guilty, but he sees nothing that is not dignified and noble in the conduct of a mob which shouts "Vive la Républiqne!" His account of the famous sitting of the Chambers on the 4th of September, the irruption of the populace, and the proclamation of the Republic is an important historical document. We have heard, however, already similar testimonies to the order and good humor of the triumphant mob, and doubtless those who sympathize with such a revolution will always be inclined to admire the revolutionists. It is, indeed, a grand thing to be enabled to say, as Mr. WASHBURNE does, "In a few brief hours of a Sabbath day I had seen a dynasty fall and a Republic proclaimed, and all without the shedding of one drop of blood." But Mr. WASHBURNE seems as little disposed as the Parisians themselves to attribute this peaceful victory to those who really accomplished it—the German victors of Sedan. One point is perfectly clear from Mr. WASHBURNE'S narrative—the story of an ardent Republican—and that is the absence of anything like a national movement in favor of Republican institutions. When the Empire fell, Paris, of course, shouted for the Déchéance. That was natural, and, indeed, inevitable. But the Republic was accepted, even by Paris, only because the Imperial Government had vanished, and there was nothing else at hand to set in its place. When a cool observer and a Republican statesman like Mr. WASHBURNE can find nothing better than this to say for the popular origin of the French Republic, we may excuse those, like M. GUIZOT and M. LANFREY, who imperatively ask that the will of the nation shall be ascertained by the convocation of a National Assembly.

The "White Stockings"—Programme of the Chicago Base-Ball Club for 1871.

From the Chicago Tribune, Jan. 18.

The admirers of the national game in Chicago have good reason to congratulate themselves upon the prospect for 1871. The White Stocking nine has been organized, and the Club will now start upon a better basis than ever before. It is particularly fortunate in being enabled, for another year, to enjoy the services of Mr. GASSETTE as President, to whose rare administrative ability, excellent judgment, energy, moral force, and, above all, deep devotion to the interests of the organization, may be attributed the splendid manner in which the White Stockings, under his personal management, lifted themselves out of the mire of demoralization and defeat, and closed up the season of 1870 as the undoubted champions of America. In view of these facts, and of Mr. GASSETTE'S peculiar fitness for the position, with its arduous labors and oftentimes delicate responsibilities, the Club has done wisely and well in vesting in him alone the absolute management and control of the nine and its affairs. The management of a professional base-ball club is largely a matter of sudden emergency, requiring prompt and immediate action, which is impossible to secure when it is necessary to call together several directors in order that such action may be determined upon, and it is safe to predict that the new plan will work admirably. This year, according to Mr. GASSETTE'S intimations, the management of the Club, in all its details, will be conducted on a strict business basis, and there is to be none of the loose mode of financiering, and the still looser mode of dealing with the players, which worked so disastrously last season.

With regard to the nine itself, a glance at the qualifications of the players who have been selected will be sufficient to show that decided improvement has been made over that of last year. Nothing need be said of the old members—Wood, Pinkham, Treacy, Duffy, Outhbert, King and McAtee—all of whom are fully the equals, and some of them the superiors, of any in the land, in their respective positions. ZETTLEIN, the new pitcher, has played with the Atlantics, of Brooklyn, for the past two years, and was counted as beingfully up to the average of that powerful team. He is swift, accurate, and shrewd, and probably heads the list of pitchers in point of endurance, having held out with unabated speed and efficiency to the twelfth inning of the famous game at Rockford between the Atlantics and Forest Citys. It is thought that, with PINKHAM as change pitcher, there need be no fears in this direction. To take the place of FLYNN in the right field we have JOE SIMMONS, of the Forest Citys, of Rockford, who, while fully the equal of FLYNN at the bat, is vastly his superior as an active, painstaking, reliable fielder. ATWATER, the substitute and change pitcher for the Red Stockings, is said to be a first-class pitcher, a fair general player, and the neatest scorer in America. He is worthy of his hire in the latter respect alone, and is a valuable acquisition. TOM FOLEY, of the Rockford nine, is mentioned as a substitute. He is a fine third baseman, a strong batter, and a good outfielder and change catcher. He can be used most advantageously. Altogether, the nine is superior to the old one, and better qualified to face the stirring "music of the spheres" which promises to characterize the season of 1871.

Atrocious Attempt on the Life of a Blacksmith by Charging His Forge with Gunpowder.

From the Syracuse Standard, Jan. 17.

The little village of Amboy, in the town of Camillus, eight miles west of this city, was thrown into excitement, yesterday, by the blowing up of a blacksmith's forge, resulting in serious injury to EVERETT JACOBSON, who was at work by it. JACOBSON carries on the shop. His fire went out Saturday night, between which time and Monday morning some one had entered the shop, raked deep in the forge-bed, and placed therein a quantity of powder, replacing the material so as not to attract notice. Shortly after 7 o'clock yesterday morning, JACOBSON kindled his forge-fire, and proceeded with his work until about 11 o'clock, when an explosion occurred that lifted the forge-bed, and sent fire and iron and tools in every direction. JACOBSON happened to be facing the forge at the time, and the flying pieces struck him about the breast and head, entirely destroying one eye, seriously damaging the other eye, and burning his face terribly. Who loaded the forge is a question that comes up, the solution of which will be sought, though probably not obtained. Amboy is the home of JOHN SIMS, and other distinguished characters; was the rendezvous of ELI VOSBURG, lately sent to prison as a party in the Red Creek bond robbery. Out of that Red Creek matter came a misunderstanding, the result of which is an effort to return SIMS to Auburn; and in this effort JACOBSON was a material witness. There are those who will say that herein is a solution to this explosion.

A Milwaukee, Wis., Mystery—The Headless Body of a Man Found in the River.

From the Milwaukee Sentinel, Jan. 13.

A horrible circumstance, leading to considerable excitement and surmise, was that of the finding of a nude, headless body of a man in the river, near the dock of TYSON'S lumber-yard, about 3 o'clock yesterday afternoon. It was partly covered with hay, enough of the chest remaining exposed to reveal that it had been that of a powerful man, some five feet ten in stature. The hands were folded under the back, and the rope by which it had been secured to the dock yet encircled it. The head had been severed close under the chin, one ear remaining, and the tongue torn from its seat, hung down toward the nape of the neck, the whole presenting a horrifying spectacle. Below the point of decapitation a narrow silk tie encircled the neck. Stripped down to the feet were the remains of a pair of black-ribbed cassimere pantaloons, in which were found two clean linen pocket-handkerchiefs, one of them enveloping a cake of shaving-soap. Over these, which were stockingless, were a pair of low gaiters, well worn at the heels. Outside of this not a vestige of clothing remains by which the body might be identified. Dr. KRAMER expressed the opinion that not it had been in the water more than several days.

It is very probable that the man was a stranger, as the police have had no account of any mysterious disappearance since that of the contractor of the bridge across the canal on Short-street, who has since turned up in California. The impression is that he fell into bad company at one of the numerous bagnios of the city, and offering resistance to robbery, was murdered, and then mutilated to prevent identification.

REAL ESTATE TRANSACTIONS.

But few persons were in attendance at the Exchange, yesterday, (Jan. 20,) as no sales were announced to take place. The day, as was expected, was a quiet one, no business of any description being transacted. Today, contrary to the usual custom, JAMES M. MILLER will offer at auction a three-story, high-stoop, brown-stone house, with stable in the rear, and six desirable lots connected with the property, located on One Hundred and Twenty-eighth and One Hundred and Twenty-ninth streets, between Sixth and Seventh avenues. The lots are situated, three on each street respectively named, and the sale is made to close an interest in an estate.

At private sale, large lots of valuable property continued to be offered. TAYLOR & SPEARS, No. 1½ Pine-street, advertise a handsomely-furnished house on Murray Hill, while V. K. Stevenson & Son, No. 11 Pine; Homer Morgan, No. 2 Pine; D. M. Seaman, No. 14 Pine; Frank G. & Davison Brown, No. 100 Broadway; W. P. Seymour, No. 171 Broadway; B. S. Levy & Co., No. 271 West Thirty-eighth-street; and John H. Morris, No. 42 West Fifty-first-street, each present choice lots from which to make selections. In suburban property, WHITEHORN & Co., No. 54 Exchange-place, offer a desirable residence at New-Brighton, Staten Island; E. ALLEN, National Park Bank, an extensive East River front, 200 by 500, at Long Island City; BLACKWELL & SMITH, No. 243 Broadway, country homes in New-Jersey and HUGH N. CAMP, No. 31 Pine-street, a plot of ground with water front of 450 feet at Hoboken, suitable for the use of steam-ships and railway accidents. The class of real estate generally advertised during the present season, for sale and on lease, is of a superior quality, and investors will find it greatly to their interests to consult our business columns from day to day.

LAW AND LAWYERS.

Opening Address by Mayor Hall Before the University Law School.

Law and Lawyers in New-York City, and the Advantages of the Metropolis as a School of Law—A Good Word for the Times' Law Reports.

The opening address of the New-York University Law School was delivered in the chapel of the University, last evening, by Mayor HALL, who is a member of the Council, and graduated at the University in the same class with the new Chancellor.

The meeting was called to order by Hon. HENRY E. DAVIES, the President, who announced that this, the first of a course of law lectures, would be delivered by Hon. A. O. HALL, the subject being, "Law in New-York; the Lawyers of the Past; the Lawyers of the Future, and the Advantages of the Metropolis for the Study of Law."

Mr. HALL commenced his lecture by saying that thirty-one years ago he stood upon the same platform on which he then stood as a graduating student. He was there now under very different circumstances from what he was when he appeared previously as a student on that platform. Before he came there on this occasion he had been told that there would be a very small audience. His surprise was to see the hall so crowded. He desired, he said, to address his remarks more particularly to the students of the University. The law students of the present must necessarily be the counselors and in a measure the conservators of the peace in the next generation. Any of the students, he said, or others just commencing the practice of the law, could obtain much valuable information by reading the periodicals of the day. The report of law cases, as they are given day by day, are of themselves a law library. The NEW-YORK TIMES every morning gives a succinct and full account of all the important law cases which have been tried the day previous. New-York City is, he said, the centre of all the important legal suits and transactions, the same as it is of many more equally important interests. New-York seems to be, and it is, the centre of the continent.

When the speaker arrived at this point all the lights in the auditorium went out from some cause. The audience were quiet, reasonably so, at least, under the circumstances. Mr. HALL continued his speech during the darkness, with the understanding that what he said was not to be considered as having been read from printed notes. Some very pertinent remarks were made by the Mayor during the darkness. Among other things, the speaker referred to the Taylor will case, and others equally important which are now pending in the Courts.

After about five minutes' darkness, the gas was relighted, and the reporters were able to take further notes. The speaker referred to the constant and continued remarks which are made by non-professional gentlemen, to the effect that law, as now practiced, is more a trade than a profession. There was too much truth in the remark. In this age and country we were, he said, getting very practical. He had been expected to speak of the lawyers of the future as well as the past. A lawyer of the future he thought must do as physicians do, —that is, make a specialty of some one thing. Why should they not? Let it be in real-estate matters, or in any one of the well-defined and well-recognized departments of the law. The laws and all the Courts of England have for a long time recognized this system of specialties. The lawyer of the future must in every respect be a practical man. He must seize upon the leading ideas of the age the same as a minister of the Gospel or a physician is occupied in his sphere. The lawyers of the past, Mr. HALL spoke as follows:

The legal history of New-York is rich with illustrious individual examples. It would be invidious to speak of the illustrious living. I will refer to exemplars who have lived in my brief day and generation, and all of whom I have known, conversed with, and loved, and whom to speak of in the hearing of Dr. DAVIES, here present, is to bring back to his mind such memories as come to the gallant war hero when he hears bugle notes and sees bahgers that remind him of glorious old battle-fields. There were his two partners, the elder and the younger KENT; the best commentaries and notes to commentaries that either left were in their lives, as good, true and learned lawyers, as recalled their compeer, SAMUEL JONES, whose father was a judge, and whose son, now on the Bench, keeps memorably alive the family excellences in private and professional life. In the reports that will be put into your hands you will delight yourselves with the clear statements and just judgments of Chief-Justices OAKLEY, DUER and ROBERTSON, or of HENRY P. EDWARDS, the greatest gentleman one ever met in the profession. There you will find the briefs of CLINTON DEWITT and LORENZO SHEPHERD, cut off just as the best days of their careers began. In those reports you will make the acquaintance, also, of WILLIAM CURTIS NOYES, one of the most conscientious, indefatigable and versatile students at this Bar. In them you will find—alas! how dull they will seem to you who never knew them—the scintillations of the elegant learning of those seven contemporaneous orators of this Bar—the dashing SANFORD, the chivalric BLUNT, the magnetic OGDEN HOFFMAN, the wonderfully-persuasive and logical DAVID GRAHAM, AMBROSE L. JORDAN, that consummate master of legal fence, and the ingenious and witty JOHN VAN BUREN. Through thirty years of these reports you will meet with the compact arguments of GEORGE BOWDOIN, who was in every sense the Chevalier Bayard of the New-York Bar. You will collate the learning of that truly great commercial lawyer, DANIEL LORD, each of whose opinions, always so thoroughly and conscientiously given, were very gospels to the profession and to clients. And lastly, you will honor this institution by frequently consulting the cases in which will be found the result of the learning of him who really founded this Law School, the Benjamin F. Butler of New-York, Gen. JACKSON'S Attorney-General, [illegible] of our State statutes. He has left this school of law students and the profession many legacies, none of which is more valuable than the following extract from one of his lectures, which I now read:

"The law-student should be taught that though many of his duties grow out of the misfortunes, the errors, and the vices of mankind, the great object of his profession is not, as is supposed by many without, and some within its pale, to derive wealth or livelihood from those evils, but to mitigate and correct them. He should also be informed that the display of rare ingenuity or of great intellectual power, in forensic discussions, is by no means the most useful or profitable labors. On the contrary, he should be instructed that it is an important and very honorable part of the business of a lawyer, by his learning, skill and sound advice, to aid his fellow-citizens in the correct transaction of their affairs, in the solution of difficult questions without resort to litigation, and in the amicable settlement of angry controversies. Above all, he should be impressed with the conviction that in conducting such legal proceedings, either in or out of Court, as may be necessary to the interest of his clients, he is called to the high dignity of ministering in the sanctuary of justice, and that it behooves him to come to the altar 'with clean hands,' and 'a pure heart' —that frankness and integrity toward his antagonists are perfectly compatible with the manly support of the rights of his employers; that chicanery and artifice are not only in the long run injurious to professional success, but utterly inconsistent with the first principles of a science whose grand basis is to 'command what is right, and prohibit what is wrong;' and that to form the character of a great jurist, it is necessary, first of all, to be a good man."

At the conclusion of the lecture, Mr. DAVIES, the President, announced that the next lecture would be delivered by Prof. BENJAMIN N. MARTIN, D. D., on the subject of "Legal Ethics."

The Methodist Old Ladies' Home—Twentieth Annual Meeting.

Yesterday was the twentieth anniversary of the founding of the Methodist Old Ladies' Home, (now located in West Forty-second-street,) and the annual meeting and reports were read. The managers' report expresses gratified for the increased interest which all classes and ages feel in the institution. The managers cry aloud for more room. There are now eighty-three inmates of the Home and the applications increase evey year. They therefore appeal to the wealthy members of the Church to secure lots in an eligible situation higher up town, whereon a larger and more commodious building may be created. Five of the old ladies have been in the Home for thirteen years, and one died a few months ago who had been there from its opening, twenty years ago, in the old building. Two of the inmates have passed the age of eighty-seven years, and three are very feeble. Three of the managers have died during the past year, one of them being Mrs. BENJAMIN HOWES, the originator and always the fast friend of the institution, and another was Mrs. L. M. DELAMATER.

The annual report of the Treasurer makes the following exhibit:

Receipts	$28,081 00
Cash on hand Jan. 1, 1870	2,687 70
Total	$30,748 70
Expenses, including $15,000 worth of bonds purchased	26,181 39
Cash balance on hand Jan. 1, 1871	$4,567 31

The meeting was largely attended, and addresses were made by several ministers and lay friends of the institution.

Serious Fire in Nassau-Street.

At 7 o'clock last evening fire was discovered on the third floor of No. 113 Nassau-street, and did considerable damage before it was extinguished. FRANK MCELROY, job printer, who occupied the third, fourth and fifth floors, suffered a damage of $6,000, as the fire reached all the floors at the rear. The American News Association, occupying the second floor, lost $1,000 in damage to stock. The Free Press newspaper occupies the first floor, and the loss of the establishment is estimated at $500. The restaurant of BRADWOOD & CANNON in the basement, is damaged by water $250, and the building, which is owned by M. G. GILHOOLY, will require $4,000 for repairs. The origin of the fire has not been ascertained.

THE UNCAPTURED PENIANS.

Complete Discomfiture of the Politicians —Arrival of Gladstone's Exiles in the City—They Pay Their Money and Take Their Choice of Hotels.

The Irish exiles arrived in this City yesterday about 1 o'clock, coming thereto from the Cuba precisely as the other cabin passengers did, landing at the Cunard wharf in Jersey City, crossing the ferry, and taking carriages to Sweeney's Hotel, corner of Chatham and Duane streets, where they secured apartments and announced their intention of paying their way as they went along. They seem under no obligations to any one for a single cent, and have determined not to accept the hospitalities of any body of men or individuals at present. They reply to all addresses of congratulation in the stereotyped form to which they replied to the address of welcome presented them on board the Cuba, and which was published in the TIMES yesterday, and announce the determination to await the arrival of their comrades before accepting any ovation.

The arrangements for the "capture" of the exiles were somewhat mixed. When the Bronz, with the Collector and the Committee of the Irish Revolutionary Brotherhood, &c., reached quarantine on Thursday night, Mr. MURPHY observed two steamboats alongside, one of which was the Antelope and the other the Fletcher. With a view to prevent any infraction of the Revenue law, he ran alongside the Cuba and boarded her, taking with him only the two Customs officers he had with him. Proceeding to the Captain's cabin, he desired the Captain to order that the two steamers should haul off, and that no person from either steamer be permitted on board the Cuba except the Health officer and his assistants, and the revenue officers. The Captain issued the necessary orders, upon which the Collector proceeded to the lower cabin, which he found filled with men who had, he learned, been passed on board from the Fletcher and the Antelope by orders of Dr. CARNOCHAN, the Health Officer. Among this party were Mr. O'GORMAN and the Committees from the Tammany organization, the Knights of St. Patrick and various other parties. The exiles were there also, and were being importuned to accept the hospitalities of the City and of the political organizations, one of them remarking that the importunities were offensive, as the hammer took money in their faces to show the depth of their sympathy.

Seeing how matters were progressing, the Collector repaired to the Bronz and invited Gen. MELLEN, the Chairman of the Committee, to accompany him on board the Cuba. As they were about to pass over the side, they were stopped by one of the Health Officer's policemen—of whom there was a large number on board—who refused to allow Gen. MELLEN to pass, though the Collector announced him as his friend. The officer was obdurate, and Mr. MURPHY went to the cabin where Dr. CARNOCHAN was dining, and made the request to the Health Officer that his friend should be allowed to come on board. After some hesitation, the application was granted.

The Collector then caused the order, denying admission to the Cuba, to be rescinded, and those on the Bronz were permitted to visit the exiles. After a little while some of the party expressed a desire to go up to the City, when Dr. CARNOCHAN offered to put them ashore at Staten Island by the Fletcher. This being somewhat inconvenient, the Bronz was sent up, and arrived at the wharf in this City about 3 o'clock yesterday morning. The Collector remained on board the Cuba all night, and came up yester day morning. The exiles declined to come up on the Antelope or the Fletcher, and reached the City as described above.

It should be stated that after the exiles had determined not to accept the hospitalities of either of the organizations, the Collector desired the Captain of the Cuba to clear the ship of all persons not authorized by the Health or the Custom regulations to be on board, but the Captain was powerless to execute the mandate, as the parties who came on the Antelope and the Fletcher refused to leave until they got ready.

The exiles were visited yesterday by immense crowds of their friends, and it became necessary to put policemen on duty at the approaches to their apartments, in order to prevent them being annoyed. They were very much fatigued and required rest, and all who were importunate in their demands were peremptorily refused admittance.

While the revenue cutter Bronz was alongside the Cuba, on Thursday night, and the Collector was engaged thereon in his official capacity, some enthusiastic Irishmen on the Bronz gave three cheers for the Irish Republic, and "three groans for John Bull."

Gen. MELLEN denies that on Thursday night, during the interview with the exiles on board the Cuba, he used the expression "Tammany Hall tricksters," as reported in the TIMES.

The addresses prepared for delivery to the exiles were presented them yesterday at Sweeney's Hotel. The following is the address of the Irish National Societies of America, presented to the released prisoners by DAVID BELL, LL. D.:

To the Irish patriots who have been lately liberated from British dungeons:

GENTLEMEN: We give you today a cordial welcome to the land of liberty. Some of us, like yourselves, were born under the dark shadow of European despotism. You rebelled against its contnuance. We feel it an honor, therefore, to call you our countrymen. You have set a noble example, and one which will not fail to be imitated until the white slavery of Ireland will be as dead as the black slavery of America. Under the most terrible trials you have proved yourselves worthy of the land you loved, and of the liberty for which you have contended. Those of us who are of American birth regard you as the pioneers in the Old World of those eternal principles of right and freedom which the fathers of the Revolution triumphantly established in America; and we bid you Godspeed while you labor like them to free your country from foreign thraldom, and set it as another star in the glorious constellation of universal liberty. Your own experience is a woful demonstration of what monarchical despotism can do to oppress, if not to destroy, the best and truest of our race. The condition of unhappy France tells us that this hour the successful a tyrannous and profligate Government can work out the ruin of a great and generous people. Gladly do we receive you in a land where such eporessities are unknown and impossible, and where the chosen ruler of forty millions of free people discharges his high trust with a frugality and faithfulness that are the surest pledges of the stability and glory of the American Republic. See to it—you who have seen so much of, and suffered so much from, human despotism—that its fell corruption shall never be permitted to poison the pure fountain of American freedom, or to affect the integrity of its civic, State, or Federal Administration. You owe this to yourselves, to Ireland, and to America. While we struggle and suffer for freedom in our native land, let us never be tempted to affiliate with those in the land of our adoption who, for their own political purposes, endeavor to degrade our race by making them instruments to destroy, at the ballot-box, that liberty in this country which we denied them in the land of their birth. Some of you are already our fellow-citizens. All of you will doubtless and in due season become such. We grasp with confidence the hands of both; for those who have already shown so much love for freedom, and loved it so well, are sure to continue its best and firmest friends, to resent and to resist any attempt to undermine and corrupt it, and to be as firm and faithful in their allegiance to the land of their adoption as they were to the land of their birth. We proudly welcome you to the land of perfect liberty. Your great countryman O'CONNELL refused to visit this country, or to receive assistance from certain classes of its citizens, because the curse of slavery prevailed within its borders. That curse is gone forever; and we stand together today under that beautiful flag which never was lowered before the foes of freedom, and which waves only over the free. In the name of the great American people, we once more bid you a cordial welcome.

A CONFLICT OF AUTHORITY.

Judge McCunn and the Alleged Contempt of Gen. Neil—What is Threatened in Case the Federal Courts Discharge Gen. Neil.

JAMES M. SHEHAN applied upon affidavits yesterday morning to Judge MCCUNN for an order to Sheriff BRENNAN to show cause why a return to the attachment against Gen. NEIL should not be made. In declining to give the order at present, Judge MCCUNN said:

In this matter a writ of habeas corpus was served on Gen. NEIL requesting him to produce the body of JOHN CASEY, with the cause of his detention. I allowed the writ upon an affidavit setting forth that JOHN CASEY was illegally restrained of his liberty by Gen. NEIL. Under the peremptory provisions of the statute I had no alternative but to issue it, for on the face of the affidavit nothing appeared but the illegal imprisonment of the relator. If on a legal return to the writ it had been exhibited that the relator was detained a duly enlisted soldier of the United States, I would have at once remanded him into the custody of his superior officers. But Gen. NEIL, admitting his control of the relator, declined to produce him before the Court, at the same time making some return to the writ. What that return was I am not informed, for I refused to receive any return which acceding the custody of the prisoner, attempted to excuse his non-production by an allegation of matter, the truth and sufficiency of which was to be determined in Court in a proper issue. On the refusal of Gen. NEIL to produce the prisoner with a proper return, I issued an attachment against him, which attachment was placed in the hands of the Sheriff for service. But the Deputy Sheriff, instead of returning the warrant of attachment with the person whom he was required by its mandate to bring into Court, took that person before a Judge of the Federal Court; and so far the process of the State Court has been utterly disregarded by the officer whose duty it was to execute it. I am informed—unofficially, however—by the Sheriff, that the neglect to bring Gen. NEIL into Court, pursuant to the attachment, was the result of inadvertence, and not of deliberate design. The motion now is for an order to show cause why the Sheriff should not bring Gen. NEIL into Court, with a return to the warrant of attachment. If I were to allow this order a collision between the State and Federal tribunals might be provoked, a catastrophe which I am anxious to do all in my power to avoid. But, regardless of all consequences, I should issue the order, if I were not persuaded that the Federal Judge before whom Gen. NEIL has been carried, will at once decline to take cognizance of a matter which is plainly within the exclusive jurisdiction of this Court. The moment that Judge is apprised that Gen. NEIL is in custody of the Sheriff upon a charge of contempt of the authority and order of this Court, he cannot do otherwise than remand the General into the custody of the Sheriff, to respond to this Court for disobedience of its mandate. I have been advised that Judge BLATCHFORD proposes to hear the matter to-morrow, and being assured that he will respect the legitimate authority of this Court, and will remand Gen. NEIL into its custody and jurisdiction, I shall reserve the decision of this motion until I am informed whether the result be in accordance with my expectation. Motion, at present, denied, with liberty to renew in the event the Federal Court order the discharge of Gen. NEIL from the custody of the Sheriff.

LECTURES.

A New Lady Lecturer—Debut of Miss Minnie C. Swaze—A Discourse on "Women of all Ages."

Miss MINNIE C. SWAZE made her first appearance as a lecturer, at the Weber Rooms, corner of Fifth-avenue and Sixteenth-street, last evening, before a select and critical assembly. Her theme was the "Women of all Ages." The débutante, who is a teacher of elocution at Vassar Female College, spoke in an easy and graceful manner, and without any restraint, her sentences being smooth and well modulated. She commenced by referring to some of the inconveniences which women have to suffer in consequence of the present conventional distinctions with regard to sex. She said that a lady could not go into a hotel as a guest unaccompanied by a gentleman without exciting suspicion, and that she was often refused admission altogether unless she presented credentials in the shape of references. She was also debarred the privilege of attending any kind of a theatrical performance when unattended by a male companion. She mentioned that she knew of several ladies possessing tickets to a concert given by a distinguished singer who were compelled to send to a gentleman to come and escort them. Their messenger miscarried, and they went alone, but on arriving at the concert-hall they were denied admittance because they had no gentleman with them. Miss SWAZE advocated the repeal of these conventionalities, which she characterized as foolish and uncalled for. She hoped that the time would come when ladies could travel alone and on their own responsibility, without being insulted causing suspicion. She then alluded to the achievements of women in art and literature, and made mention of several who were celebrated for their valor and ability as rulers. She said that she saw no reason why women should not be permitted to become physicians and lawyers, and to practice on a level with their male competitors.

"The Geography of Man"—Lecture by Dr. Douai.

At the meeting of the Liberal Club last evening Dr. DOUAI delivered a lecture on "The Geography of Man." He said that plants are entirely dependent on soil and climate, and that man changes the habits of plants by change of soil; that animals are less dependent on soil and climate on account of their power of locomotion; that change of soil and climate changes the habits of animals, and that man, as a mere animal, is so much dependent on soil and climate that he remains unchanged for thousands of years, if soil and climate remain the same about him; that the nearer we approach the equator, the darker the complexion becomes; and that the more mountainous a country is, the taller, stronger and more robust is man. In his opinion, large continents are a hindrance to civilization, and islands and peninsulas are more favorable to progressive civilization on account of the facility of intercourse, a more changeable climate and a richer composition of the surface of the soil. Originally there was only one race of men, who differed slightly in different countries—in some darker, in some dark; the second race of men were yellow, and the third race which came ten thousand years later, were of a lighter color; the latter adopted artificial means for improvement, they cultivated mental and bodily gymnastics, and they encouraged emigration for the development of the race.

Dr. HILL asked for an explanation in reference to a remark made by the lecturer as to animals having a nice language of their own.

Mr. KELLY said he could corroborate the lecturer's statement, as HORACE GREELEY had a parrot that was always swearing for him. [Roars of laughter.] Other members having addressed the meeting, the Club adjourned.

Water—A Lecture by Prof. C. F. Chandler.

Prof. CHAS. F. CHANDLER delivered a lecture on "Water" at the Academy of Music last evening, under the auspices of the American Institute. The subject was very fully illustrated by experiments, many of which were at once beautiful and novel. The combustion of phosphorus and magnesium submerged in glass jars filled with water, and the action of various acids, alkalis and other substances upon different kinds of water, was displayed. Prof. STAR also gave an exhibition through an oxyhydrogen microscope of a number of forms of minute animal life existing in drops of water. These were greatly magnified upon the wall, and their animated gyrations "brought down the house." The lecturer stated that very few of these creatures were found in the Croton, and many solutions had to be strained to secure one healthy specimen, and that our water was of the very purest quality.

Lead pipe, he said, poisons the water that stands in it; there is danger from that cause; block-tin-lined pipe is the best. Very interesting references were made to artesian wells in this and other countries; causes that deteriorated the quality of water, its influence upon health, and the nature of diseases resulting from its use. The lecturer said that the gneiss-rock foundation and clear gravel surface peculiar to the district of country through which the Croton River coursed rendered it impossible for it to be anything else but pure.

Rewards and Punishments of Life—Lecture by Rev. John Hall.

Rev. JOHN HALL delivered an interesting and highly instructive lecture on the "Rewards and Punishments of Life," before a large and fashionable audience at Association Hall last evening. The lecturer prefaced his address by a comparison of the laws regulating human society with the workings of a tread-mill, showing in detail the effects of departure from and compliance with their general principles, as evinced in their bearings on our relations to society. In this connection he stated the ethical difference between right and wrong, proving from daily experience that while the wrong-doer was constantly punished for his misdoings, the observance of right was attended with the most agreeable and happy results. He explained that by an intuitive instinct, innate in the human breast, all men respected the authority confirmed by the masses, and feared its punishment, and by the same feeling they sought for reward, not from society in its organized form, but in the confidence and respect of its individual members. Passing to a higher consideration of the subject, he maintained that the principles guiding the organization and composition of society when applied to divine laws, resulted in the same ends, and that human actions, whether of right or wrong, produced similar results, though in a much higher and more comprehensive degree.

Relations of Natural Laws to Our Minds —Lecture by Rev. Merrill Richardson.

Rev. MERRILL RICHARDSON, pastor of the New-England Congregational Church, corner of Madison-avenue and Forty-seventh-street, delivered the fourth of a series of scientific lectures, last evening, before a large audience, on the subject of the "Relations of Natural Laws to Our Minds." Mr. RICHARDSON explained that greatness, whether viewed in its social or national bearings, was the result of the development of internal resources, and the source of all power was in the exercise of those faculties which nature has so plentifully provided. Experience afforded convincing proof that the richest and most favored nations lay for centuries unknown and unhonored, and the intellectual capacity of man alone brought them prominence and renown. No nation ever rose in the scale of culture, morals and spirituality, except in accordance with the scientific progress of its people, and the development of his mental faculties was the right and duty of every man. He disclaimed the religious convictions which restrained the pursuit of ecclesiastical studies in any sect, and asserted that they were given by God for a high purpose and their possession detailed a tremendous responsibility. In conclusion he maintained that science and its study was a divine prerogative, accorded only to man as an evidence of his superiority over all created beings, and to its advancement he could justly devote his energies untrammeled by narrow sectarian belief.

The inquest over the remains of ALBERT S. NORTON, whose death from poison occurred in such a questionable manner, yesterday morning, in Jersey City, as to challenge investigation at the time, was held last evening. During the day the Coroner discovered that the deceased purchased five grains of strychnine from Mr. BILLS, a druggist, about three hours before his death, ostensibly to kill cats. The poison was prepared by Mr. BILLS, labeled, and NORTON was directed how to use it. This statement, volunteered by the druggist at the inquest, removed many suspicions, and the testimony of the sons of the deceased was a simple narration of unimportant facts. The jury returned a verdict of intentional suicide. Neither of the sons of the deceased had ever been arrested. The statement in the papers, yesterday, in regard to this point was incorrect.

The examination of witnesses was not concluded when the Court adjourned. The cases will be continued on Tuesday next.

Sudden Death of Mr. Burden, the Iron Founder—A Singular Coincidence.

From the Troy Press, Jan. 19.

The announcement of the sudden death of Mr. HENRY BURDEN, of the nail factory, one of the largest iron workers in the country, was received as startling intelligence this morning, and for a time was scarcely credited. Mrs. PROUDFIT, the daughter of Mr. BURDEN, first discovered that he was dead. She went down to Woodside, the delightful residence of the BURDENS, this morning, and arrived at the house at about 11 o'clock. Entering she inquired if her father was enjoying good health, and receiving an affirmative answer proceeded to his apartments. Mr. HENRY BURDEN'S man-servant responded, and in answer to Mrs. PROUDFIT stated that Mr. BURDEN was in very good health, and was taking a nap on the sofa. Mrs. PROUDFIT entered the room, and stepping lightly to the sofa stooped over Mr. BURDEN and affectionately kissed him. She noticed that he felt very cold, and in an instant was astounded by the discovery that her father was dead. The household was immediately summoned in answer to the sad announcement, which came like a startling thunderbolt. Mr. BURDEN had been to the breakfast table as usual this morning, and had appeared fully as spirited and well feeling as at any recent period. His death was caused from heart disease, as he had been a sufferer from this complaint. He had made it a custom to retire for rest every morning at about 11 o'clock, and on this morning as usual, passing gently and quietly away from the sleep of a mortal to the everlasting repose of death. His servant was in the room all through the morning and did not even know that Mr. BURDEN was dead until the discovery was made by Mrs. PROUDFIT.

Mr. BURDEN was, we believe, a Scotchman, and came to this city while yet a young man, and was employed in the lower part of the city. He was in limited circumstances, but being connected with the iron business, was the inventor of his famous horse-shoe machine, his rotary squeezer, &c., which brought him ample fortune and continued success, leaving him at the time of his death, the head of one of the largest iron establishments in the country.

Mr. BURDEN leaves two sons, JAMES A. and I. TOWNSEND, who have been associated with him in the iron business under the firm name of H. BURDEN & SONS, for some time past. He also leaves three daughters, MARGARET, wife of E. PROUDFIT; HELEN, wife of Major-Gen. MCDOWELL; JESSIE, wife of the son of Gen. WOODFORD, of Buffalo. Mrs. BURDEN died March 10, 1860, and it is a somewhat singular circumstance that her death took place about the same time in the morning that Mr. BURDEN expired.
